

The Black Cat

APRIL 1907

Aunt Lilly

Robert H. Langford

The Hired Man's Point of View

Susan Keating Glaspell

The Finding of the Fledgeling

Shannon Birch

A Pair of Dead-Beats

$100 Prize

Juna Papworth

The Mansion of Forgetfulness

Don Mark Lemon

Price 5 Cents

Vol. XII., No. 7. Whole No. 129. Copyright, 1907, by
The Shortstory Publishing Company.

We have many thousands of salesmen directly and indirectly promoting the sales of Sapolio. A few words of suggestion and of encouragement, meant for those in our direct employ, may interest the wider circle, which includes 3,500 wholesalers, 21,000 of their salesmen, 150,000 retail dealers, their 200,000 clerks, and the millions of housekeepers who use Sapolio and commend it to their friends.

INSTRUCTIONS TO SALESMEN of Sapolio

Talk CLEANLINESS—Constantly keep before those whom you approach the relation which cleanliness bears to Life. Health, happiness, success largely depend upon it. Self-respect dwells not in dirty houses with careless people. The first commandment of social life is: "Be Clean."

Talk CHEERFULLY—You represent a good article—offer it with a confident smile. The great public are our friends. Success can afford to smile. Leave despondency and complaints about the weather, dull times and reluctant buyers, to the peddlers of imitations and cheap substitutes. It is hard work for them to "reflect a shining countenance." Tell the storekeeper that it is a good rule never to buy goods from a grumbling salesman—his discontent advertises the fact that his wares do not sell readily.

Talk FAIR PRICES—The best stores will be your best customers, because they are themselves clean. The grocer who keeps dirt down can keep his prices up. Many a dealer buries his profits under the dust in his store, and then vainly tries to keep up his trade by selling cheaper goods.

Talk ECONOMY—Less waste is our greatest national need. Cheapness is rarely economy. Our ancestors left us solid old furniture because there were no cheap instalment systems in their days. Sapolio may cost a trifle more than cheap substitutes, but it outlasts them.

Talk CONFIDENTLY—Every sensible dealer keeps Sapolio in stock. The public prefers honest, well-known goods. Urge the grocer not to load his shelves with experiments, and to listen to no suggestions that he can substitute anything for Sapolio—it is a losing game. He will not do it if he respects himself—he will not do it if he wants the respect of his customers.

ENOCH MORGAN'S SONS CO.

Copyright, 1907, by A. E. Little & Co.

A Protest Against Race Suicide

FOOTNOTES I When the Stork arrives — that's the time to begin with Sorosis. That's just the time — when the bones and muscles are tender — for insuring for the little ones correctly formed, shapely, strong, comfortable feet throughout life. Sorosis shoes so fittingly and comfortably clothe the feet from infancy to old age that they increase the happiness and usefulness of those who grow up in them. Equip the little folks with a proper "understanding" by starting them on life's journey in Sorosis Shoes.

Copyright, 1907, by A. E. Little & Co.

FOOTNOTES II Sorosis shoes are the only shoes that are sold the world over. They may be had for both sexes and all ages at Sorosis stores and departments in leading cities of the world, as follows:

New York	New Haven	Buffalo	Milwaukee	San Francisco	Glasgow	Cape Town
Brooklyn	Hartford	Chicago	St. Paul	Los Angeles	Edinburgh	(Christiansburg)
Philadelphia	Providence	Detroit	Kansas City	London	Dublin	Copenhagen
Pittsburg	Albany	Cincinnati	St. Louis	Liverpool	Berlin	Honolulu
Washington	Troy	Toledo	Denver	Munich	Frankfurt a. M.	Manila
Baltimore	Syracuse	Cleveland	Omaha	Birmingham	Hamburg
Boston	Rochester	Minneapolis	Seattle	Kail	Vienna

WRITERS

We sell Stories, Poems, Jokes, Illustrations, Designs, and all publishable material on Commission

If you can produce salable work we know who wants it and who will pay best prices for it. We can save you time and money in the disposal of your Productions by our careful system. Our plan is explained in our booklet "Cash Returns" sent to any address for four cents.

The Burell Syndicate, 750 Gramercy Bldg., N. Y. City

ARTISTS

WRITE WE PLACE YOUR for Money STORIES FREE

We teach you by mail to write the kind of stories that editors want, and we charge you nothing for helping to place your work. Write for our practical plan.

PAGE-DAVIS SCHOOL
Dept. 225, 90 Wabash Ave., Chicago

SHORT STORIES

Bring high prices. Thousands of good stories which might easily be made salable, make up the great mass of "rejected manuscripts." Our School of Journalism, in charge of successful authors, criticizes, corrects and revises, as well as teaches how to write. Write for booklet.

NAT'L CORRESPONDENCE INSTITUTE

26-51 34 Nat'l Bank Bldg., Washington, D. C.

$3,000 for 10 STORIES

Nothing pays like success in writing. We sell stories, plays, and book MSS. on commission; we criticize and revise them, and tell you where to sell them. Story-Writing and Journalism taught by mail. Our students sell their MSS. for one to five cents a word. Endorsed by leading newspapers, magazines, and book publishers. Our free booklet, "Writing for Profit," tells how and gives the proof. Special re-day offer. Thornton West, Editor-in-Chief. Founded, 1886.

THE NATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

65 The Baldwin - - - INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Authors' Agency.

Send stamp for Booklet C to

Wm. A. Dresser, Garrison Hall, BOSTON, MASS.

Mention The Black Cat.

IF YOU ARE A WRITER

We can aid you to find a market for anything you write.

MSS. SUCCESSFULLY PLACED.
Criticism, Revised, Typewritten.

References: Edwin Markham, Margaret E. Sangster, and others. Established 1890. Send for leaflet E.

UNITED LITERARY PRESS 189 5th AVE. NEW YORK.

SONG WRITERS

Send us your poems. We compose the music. Simple songs often make great hits. Estab. 36 years.

GROOM MUSIC CO.

4 Steinway Hall, - Chicago

Good Piano Tuners Earn $5 to $15 per day

We can teach you quickly BY MAIL. The new scientific Tune-a-Phone method endorsed by highest authorities. Knowledge of music not necessary. Write for free booklet.

NILES BRYANT SCHOOL, 96 Music Hall, Battle Creek, Mich.

SINGING VOICE CULTURE FREE

Illinois Conservatory, 205 Lakeside Bldg., Chicago

ACTING

Taught by Correspondence. Positions secured when qualified. Booklet on Dramatic Art FREE. Chicago School of Education, 217 Chicago Opera House Bldg., Chicago.

SEND YOUR SONG POEMS TO ME

I will write the music and present to Big N.Y. Publishers. I made a fortune writing songs; my experience will aid you. My songs "Blue Bell" and "Way Down in My Heart" achieved world-wide fame. Write to-day for Free Booklet. EDWARD MADDEN, 45 Madden Bldg., New York

SONG POEMS WANTED, also Musical Compositions. We pay Royalty, Publish and Popularize. We Compose and Arrange melody FREE of charge. GEO. JABERG MUSIC CO. 160 W. 7th St., Cincinnati, O.

SONG POEMS WANTED: We compose Real Melodies. We set Real Arrangements. Our patrons say we do better work than any concern advertising to-day. Send inc. for specimen of our work and be convinced. Bay State Music Co., Uphams Corner, Boston, Mass.

SONG-POEMS and musical manuscript arranged. Publication secured. Cash or royalty if available. Wainwright Music Co., 78-36 Evergreen Ave., Chicago

SONGS Pub'd ROYALTY On By New York's BIG MUSIC FIRM. NO CHARGE FOR WRITING MUSIC. North American Music Co., Dept. C, 60 W. 28th St., New York.

WRITE A for us to-day. It may make you famous and be worth THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS. Hayes Music Co., 14 Star Bldg., Chicago

SONGS AND MUSIC

PUBLISHED ON ROYALTY.

We pay you one-half the profits. Poems revised, Music composed to words. Copyright secured in your name, if desired. Send Manuscript, which will be returned if not available.

POPULAR MUSIC CO., (Inc.) 419-69 Dearborn St. CHICAGO

FROM PAUL DE KOCK

FROM DUMAS

FROM SHAKESPEARE

Less Than HALF-PRICE

Goods Sent on Approval Money After Examination
EASY PAYMENTS IF DESIRED

Only a Limited Number of Sets—Less Than a Dozen of Some

For twelve years I have been selling my books at wholesale, direct from the factory, to dealers and large book stores. I own my own bindery—one of the largest in the country—now I shall deal directly with the PUBLIC. On account of the failure of three large publishing houses and my arrangements with others I have, temporarily, the following bargains at the most unheard of prices. No money until you can satisfy yourself that you are getting the GREATEST BOOK BARGAIN EVER OFFERED.

FREE!!! A $3.00 De Luxe Set of EUGENE FIELD'S WORKS sent FREE OF COST with each sale.

It is a condition of all accepted orders that I deliver prepaid, for examination, books numbers of which are marked in the accompanying special catalogue price. It is understood that no payment need be made until 30 days after delivery.

DE LUXE EDITIONS	ORDER BY NUMBER	NOTE THE PRICES	Regular Price	Special Price	DE LUXE EDITIONS	ORDER BY NUMBER	NOTE THE PRICES	Regular Price	Special Price
Works of Eugene Field	4 Vols. Ribbed Cloth	$3.00	Free		Eugene Sue	14 Vols. Buckram	$42.00	$28.75	34
Oriental Tales and Arabian Nights	15 Vols. Cloth	$150.00	$44.25	1	PEPYS DIARY	4 Vols. 5/8 Pers. Mar	$27.00	$18.50	26
Lafayette	6 Vols. 5/8 Pers. Mar	$25.00	$18.75	7	SMOLLETT	4 Vols. 5/8 Pers. Mar	$27.00	$18.50	27
Fielding	4 Vols. Cloth	$27.50	$18.75	4	TOLSTOI	12 Vols. Cloth	$30.00	$18.00	28
Dalmeida	4 Vols. Cloth	$27.50	$18.75	6	Prescott	12 Vols. Cloth	$30.00	$18.00	30
Dalmeida	4 Vols. Cloth	$27.50	$18.75	6	Carlyle	10 Vols. Cloth	$25.00	$15.00	31
Dalmeida	4 Vols. Cloth	$27.50	$18.75	6	Dumas	10 Vols. Cloth	$25.00	$15.00	32
Dalmeida	4 Vols. Cloth	$27.50	$18.75	6	Paul de Kock	25 Vols. Buckram	$100.00	$60.00	33
Dalmeida	4 Vols. Cloth	$27.50	$18.75	6	Stevenson	10 Vols. 5/8 Pers. Mar	$30.00	$18.00	34
Dalmeida	4 Vols. Cloth	$27.50	$18.75	6	Shakespeare	20 Vols. 5/8 Pers. Mar	$40.00	$24.00	35
Dalmeida	4 Vols. Cloth	$27.50	$18.75	6	Scott	24 Vols. Cloth	$175.00	$105.00	36
Dalmeida	4 Vols. Cloth	$27.50	$18.75	6

SPECIAL: A 15 vol. ed. of KIPLING, gold tops, gold stamped back, bound in cloth, large, clear type, handy volumes.
FREE WITH EVERY PURCHASE OF $50.00 OR OVER.

All books are sent charges prepaid, subject to 30 days' approval. Right to be returned to dealer on all orders when limited editions are exhausted. CLINTON T. BRAINARD.

On orders amounting to less than $50.00 from outside area of the Minneapolis River, 10% are extra additional will be charged to conversion conversion. I agreed to pay for these books. I satisfactory (thereafter, on each order retained, until the special conversion price is paid, 10% full, when the title shall pass to me. If the books do not prove entirely satisfactory, I will supply new within ten days of receipt of books, to return them they may be my choice to the printer of CLINTON T. BRAINARD, 1000 Exchange St., Minneapolis, Minn.

Write your address plainly and Mail this Coupon TO-DAY.
 Clinton T. Brainard, 625 Fifth Av., N. Y. City.
 Please send me the following Nos. of the sets to accordance with conditions stated above:.....
 Signature.....
 Occupation.....
 Business Address.....
 City and State.....
 Deliver Books at.....

B.C. Apr. 27.

SHORTHAND IN 30 DAYS

We absolutely guarantee to teach shorthand complete in only thirty days. You can learn in spare time in your own home, no matter where you live. No need to spend months as with old systems. Boyd's Syllabic System is easy to learn—easy to write—easy to read. Simple. Practical. Speedy. Sure. No ruled lines—no positions—no shading as in other systems. No long list of word signs to confuse. Only nine characters to learn and you have the entire English language at your absolute command.

The best system for stenographers, private secretaries, newspaper reporters and railroad men. Lawyers, ministers, teachers, physicians, literary folk and business men and women may now learn shorthand for their own use. Does not take continual daily practice as with other systems. Our graduates hold high-grade positions everywhere. Send to-day for booklets, testimonials, etc.

CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS
855 Chicago Opera House Block, Chicago, Ill.

Writer's Red Book

A handy guide to success for young authors. Tells how to prepare manuscript; how standard stories are written; has key plan which classifies the magazines and indicates the particular classes of matter required by each; enables the writer to determine to what magazine his story or sketch is best suited and tells how to market it. Contains complete classified lists of all the principal publications and manuscript buyers in this country and England. Send ten cents in stamps for a copy to

NATIONAL CORRESPONDENCE INSTITUTE
56-58 Second National Bank Building, Washington, D. C.

Real Parisian Life

Tales More Fascinating and Exciting than Balzac or French
Court Memoirs

I have secured the sets of Paul de Kock which were awarded the Gold Medal at St. Louis. Rather than rebind them—they are slightly rubbed through handling—I will sell them at half price as long as they last, and upon small monthly payments.

Paul de Kock

The Merriest
French Humorist

has written sparkling, witty, amusing, riveting novels—antidotes for melancholy. The stories, literally translated, race merrily along, nothing didactic or dull; as original as Boccaccio, as mirthful as Gil Blas, more fascinating than Sterne or Smollett.

SHORT FASCINATING STORIES

"Paul de Kock is a tonic in books instead of bottles."—Mrs. O'Fall. "His charming characters seem to be under the influence of champagne."—Charles Lever. "He has kept France laughing for years."—the Smollett of France.—Boston Herald. I dislike the superlatives, but I believe this the best and richest book value ever offered. The set contains the most delicate and artistic French illustrations made especially for this work by Glacken, Sloan, Wenzell, Sterner, and many other famous artists.

ILLUSTRATED BOOKLET FREE

giving you full particulars and sample pages of this rare set of books, but you must write to-day, stating whether you are interested in cloth or half morocco binding, or full binding.

C. T. BRAINARD, 425 Fifth Ave., N. Y. City.

When writing, in order to get full discounts, give name and date of this magazine, along with Signature..... City and State.....

Occupation..... Residence Address.....

Business Address..... Deliver Books at.....

SEND FOR MY CATALOGUE OF BARGAINS.

JOURNALISM

Taught by Mail. The original method. 14th year. Big demand for writers. We develop, instruct. We get results. Our teachers themselves successful editors. Practical work from the start. Individual instruction. Easy Payment Plan. Particulars free.

The Sprague Correspondence School of Journalism.
878 Majestic Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Do you want a better salary?

Successful graduates with big salaries everywhere. Taught thoroughly by mail. Beautiful prospectus free on request. Address
PAGE-DAVIS SCHOOL
Dept. 425, 90 Wabash Ave., Chicago

LEARN TO WRITE ADVERTISEMENTS

Successful graduates with big salaries everywhere. Taught thoroughly by mail. Beautiful prospectus free on request. Address
PAGE-DAVIS SCHOOL
Dept. 425, 90 Wabash Ave., Chicago

IF WE TEACH YOU TO DRAW

You can earn $20 to $50 per week, and upwards. All branches of drawing successfully taught by correspondence. PRACTICAL and PERSONAL instruction. Successful students everywhere.

Large '07 Catalog FREE. WRITE
SCHOOL OF APPLIED ART
6-11 Fine Arts Bldg., BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

BE AN ILLUSTRATOR

Learn to draw for newspapers and magazines. We will teach you by correspondence. The oldest and most thorough school in the world. Catalog sent free.

SCHOOL OF ILLUSTRATION
Founded by F. Holme
Office 22, 90 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO

ARN MONEY WITH YOUR CAMERA

WE TEACH you what to photograph, how to do it, and help you to sell your pictures. Simple and easy way to pay vacation expenses. Something entirely new. Write to-day for free booklet.

National Correspondence Institute
26-91 2d Nat'l Bank Bldg., Washington, D. C.

BECOME A CARTOONIST

Qualify at home in spare time to earn $25.00 a week. Men like McCutcheon, Briggs, Davenport, Outcault, Kemble, and others earn $25.00 and upwards a year.

We shape the course to meet your individual needs; develop you to do the original work that enables artists to hold high-salaried positions.

We guarantee proficiency to earnest students, and secure positions when completed.

You incur no obligation by writing now for full information about the "Acme Way" of teaching drawing by mail. We also teach Illustration, Designing, Architectural, Mechanical, or Sheet Metal Pattern Drafting successfully. "At 8 years." THE ACME SCHOOL OF DRAWING, 4-810 ACME BUILDING, KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI.

RESIDENT INSTRUCTION IS PREFERRED.

To You Who Write!

This little chat is for writers. If you write, or if you have an itching to write, we want to talk to you. We know some things about writing that may interest you, and we shall try to put them in such a chatty form that you will forget you are reading an advertisement until we break in solemnly and ask, "Good morning!" Have you subscribed for THE EDITOR?

Lots of authors have. Not so many years ago we entered a subscription from a man out in California. We had never seen his name in the magazines, but we had faith in him, as we have in all honest workers. One day we found a story of his in a magazine, and presently another, and another, till we came to look for them regularly. We were immensely pleased at his success, and down in one corner of our heart we were egotistically certain that our magazine had been one of its factors. We never dared voice our belief, it is true, but we cherished it for our own satisfaction. One morning, in our mail, we found a letter from him. "When I subscribed," he wrote, "I had a goodly file of my manuscripts laid away. Through your help I have disposed of the major portion." It was signed in that great scrawling hand so many editors know—"Jack London."

If you want to follow the trail blazed by Mr. London, you should go about it by studying the profession. We pride ourselves on the fact that THE EDITOR is a pretty good, live text-book. It is a mighty poor sort of a teacher, you know, who never sees an educational journal; new methods and systems are cropping out constantly. No doctor dares get behind in his profession. And no writer—we leave this to you—likes to send a manuscript to a magazine that suspended a few months ago; nor allow an article to go unread that may cover just the peg on which his or her rejections cling. The writer wants hints, helps,—as many of them as possible; everybody does. Just at this moment we cannot recall a magazine that better meets this want than THE EDITOR.

How to Judge Literary Bureaus

When you get a glittering prospectus from a company that promises to make you an author of world-wide reputation, ask yourself these questions:

1. Have the men who form the bureau ever written anything themselves?
2. Have they had years of experience in the work of editing and revising?
3. Have they ever accomplished anything for authors?
4. Has the bureau any standing among editors and publishers?

Now, after you have drawn the blue pencil through the glittering generalities of their statements, study our reasons for believing we are warranted in expecting and deserving your patronage.

1. Not an editor in our employ is an editor alone; every man has written and published his own stories in high-class magazines; every man has published his own books through the best houses in America.

2. THE EDITOR LITERARY BUREAU has been before the public for over twelve years.

The Editor

LESLIE W. QUIRK, Editor

"FOR PEOPLE WHO WRITE"

IT PUBLISHES:

Practical articles by prominent authors
Articles on story writing—Articles on essay writing
Articles on verification
Articles on marketing manuscripts
Hints on preparing manuscripts
Notes from editors stealing seeds
Reviews of all new publications
Reviews of all suspended publications
Reviews of all timely editorial needs
Lists of magazines that want manuscripts
Complete monthly report on literary market
Answers to literary queries, departments, etc.

Also conducts literary bureau under direct supervision of Leslie W. Quirk, in which is offered expert criticism on manuscripts, advice as to strengthening, correcting, revising, mastery of technique, etc., together with a list of magazine, syndicate, or newspaper markets for which each is best adapted. Established 1895.

During the whole period of its existence it has handled more work than any other, and has passed upon matter that later appeared in the very best magazines and between the covers of the books of the very best publishing houses.

3. By criticism and market advice, it has enabled its patrons to sell work submitted to it to all the worth-while American magazines,—Century, Harper's, McClure's, S. E. Post, Ladies' Home Journal, Cosmopolitan, Red Book, etc., etc. Its patrons won the three capital prizes and the majority of others in the last Black Cat contest.

4. It is recommended by such authors as Jack London, J. L. Harbour, Edward S. Ellis, etc., etc., and by such editors as those of Munsey's, Success, Lippincott's, Atlantic, W. H. Companion, etc., of course, by all publications to which it has directed salable work.

We invite comparison with the so-called "syndicates," "agents," "schools," etc.

AN OFFER OF FREE CRITICISM

You are interested in writing, else you would not have read to this point.

THE EDITOR is the best journal of information for literary workers that is published, else it would not be read by more writers than all the similar publications in the world put together. Every author of note and every editor knows and recommends it.

Susan Keating Gaspell, one of the cardinal prize winners in the last Black Cat contest, says: "I study THE EDITOR carefully every month; any one who attempts to write short stories would be very short-sighted to try to get along without it."

Isn't it worth a dollar a year just to have the very latest, the most intimate information about prize contests? Isn't it worth that much to have a monthly report on all the papers, syndicates and magazines that purchase manuscripts? Isn't it worth that much to read a half dozen or more articles each month on essay and poem and story writing, and on essay and poem and story selling, to say nothing of the clever verse, the answers to any literary questions you may care to ask, and the editorial inspiration?

You don't need to answer these questions; we know the answers.

We are going to invite you to join us, and if you refuse you can go off in a corner and sulk by yourself while your literary friends read THE EDITOR and get into print. We think this invitation will put you on our books, however, for it is simply this: Send us one dollar for a full year's subscription, and with it—not afterwards, mind you!—one prose manuscript of less than 2,000 words, and we will give the frankest, bluntest, most helpful criticism you ever read, including comments on each of the following topics: appearance of manuscript, title, minor points, unity, proportion, characters, style, plot, general report and advice, with list, if salable, of from six to ten newspaper, syndicate, or magazine markets which seem probable purchasers. This service, at the regular rates of our Literary Bureau, would ordinarily cost you one dollar by itself. If your manuscript exceeds 2,000 words, and is under 5,000, add fifty cents to your remittance. The offer is to new subscribers only. If you are already a subscriber, send us your friend's subscription and your manuscript, or mail our offer to some writer who needs us.

There is just one condition—you must clip and return this invitation, and you must send in your dollar and your manuscript under one enclosure.

Well?

EDITOR LITERARY BUREAU, 150 Nassau St., New York City

The Woman In The Case

—mother, wife or daughter—is entitled to the Unfailing Protection of Life Insurance. The ticking of the seconds should remind you that procrastination is the thief, not only of time, but of money, opportunity and family happiness. Delay in Life Insurance may deprive your family of their future support, comfort and education. A Life Insurance policy in is the husband and father's greatest and most practical evidence of his affection for "the woman in the case."

The Prudential

Insure NOW for Her Benefit

Write To-day for Information showing what
One Dollar a Week invested in Life Insurance
Will Do. Dept. 93.

The Prudential

Insurance Co. of America

Incorporated as a Stock Company by the State of New Jersey

JOHN F. DRYDEN
President

Home Office
NEWARK, N. J.

The Black Cat

A Monthly Magazine of Original Short Stories.

Copyright, 1907, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. All rights reserved.

Vol. XII., No. 7.
Whole No., 129.

APRIL, 1907.

5 cents a copy.
50 cents a year.

Entered at the Post-Office at Boston, Mass., as second-class matter.

THE BLACK CAT is devoted exclusively to original, unusual, fascinating stories—every number is complete in itself. It publishes no serials, translations, borrowings, or stealings. It pays nothing for the name or reputation of a writer, but the highest price on record for Stories that are Stories, and it pays not according to length, but according to strength. To receive attention, manuscripts must be sent unrolled, fully prepaid, and accompanied by addressed and stamped envelope for return. All MSS. are received and returned at their writers' risk.

CAUTION.—The entire contents of THE BLACK CAT are protected by copyright, and publishers everywhere are cautioned against reproducing any of the stories, either wholly or in part.

Aunt Lilly.*

BY ROBERT H. LANGFORD.

AN old, crooked, shrunken, black woman, half bent under a load of "white folk's clo'es," shuffled and plowed her way along through the deep, yellow dust of the big road that led to the River Bottom. The sweat fell from her narrow, wrinkled face in great drops, and she stuck her claw-like hands into the heavy bundle of clothes to keep it from falling off of her head to the ground. She straightened her back but once during the last half mile to her cabin (which stood in the edge of the Great Cane Brake), and looked keenly ahead down the road. "De Gawd know, I know widout lookin'," she said fiercely, under her breath.

Then she shifted her eyes back from the distance, where a buzzard sailed high against the cloudless sky, and only the broken branches of a dead tree arose from the alders and sumac in the fence corners and showed white and flat against the still sky.

She plodded on, never raising her head again, but she muttered strangely and menacingly, and a quiver shot through her and she drew her breath shudderingly as she passed across the shadow cast by the dead tree. A long time ago—years before—she had followed a body of men, a grim, silent, terrible, masked band of Ku Klux, down the big road to this tree and had, alternately, shrieked her prayers and curses, while they hanged by his long, yellow neck the only child she had ever had. The boy had borne an unmistakable stamp—he was tall and well-featured, quick to think and to act, rebellious and devilish in both. But the mother love was all the deeper and more vehement because of what she alone knew—his pitiable beginning, and his ruthless, well-nigh inevitable ending. Therefore she had grown to hate the ruling race with a passion almost demoniacal in its bitter intensity.

* Copyright, 1907, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. Copyright secured in Great Britain. All rights reserved.

When she at last reached the shade of the beech tree that stood in her cleanly swept yard, and had sucked long from the gourd of cold water from her well—that was also beneath the tree—she sat down on a bench, almost spent, too tired to open the bank of smouldering embers beside a half-log at the corner of the cabin and cook a corn-pone and “brile a strip o’ middlin’.” She had not tasted food since early morning, either. Miss “Cath’ern” had offered her a plate of tempting food, at noon that day in town, but she had gruffly refused—for she had not accepted, in years and years, bite or sup or favor from anybody. She was thrifty, she worked hard, and she paid her way independently.

When she had been sitting on the bench a while she turned around and looked furtively toward the Cane Brake that grew clear up to the garden fence. After a long survey of the thick, lush cane, she seemed to be satisfied. Then she looked quickly up and down the road, untied the faded red turban on her head, and extracted several small pieces of money from the closely folded rim. These she counted, again and again, and at last, sure that her calculations were correct, untied a second handkerchief from her head, a black silk one that had belonged to her son,—one that she always wore under the red turban. It was curiously quilted and stitched until it was stiff with coins—a few of them gold—the accumulation of years of her hard earnings and rigid self-denial. She added the money she had just counted, and taking a threaded needle from her hair, sewed it into the handkerchief securely. Then she tied both handkerchiefs back on her head, turban fashion, as they were before.

Taking up a slip of green cane she leaned forward and began to scratch on the hard ground in front of her. After a while the scratches took the form of a rude obelisk.

"Dat's 'bout de way ole Moster's is—en dat's 'bout de way I'm gwine hab his'n. Jes' as big, an' jes' as white—an' ebbery bit as gran' lookin'—cas'n, cas'n, 'fo' de Gawd dat know it oughter be!"

For years and years all her life interest had centered around what she had at last accomplished—the accumulation of enough money to place at the head of the lone, shunned grave back in the little clearing, that bordered the road-side above her cabin, a tombstone that should be in every way the counterpart of her "ole Moster's," Judge Jacob Morton. Aunt Lilly sat there and furrowed the earth with her cane until the sun was sinking down below the tall trees of the Swamp behind her, and the air was becoming heavy with the odors of the marsh blooms and vegetation—mingled with the scent of cypress burning somewhere across the lake.

Slim, long-tailed, half-wild chickens crept through the cane into the garden and flew up amongst the branches of the peach and plum trees to roost. A motherly looking old hen, with week-old chickens, slipped cautiously into the yard, eyeing the old woman furtively, and, with low clucks of warning, called her little brood under a big old iron wash-pot, that, having a piece broken out of its side, had been inverted and had done duty as a hovel for generation after generation of the motherly old hen's chickens—chickens that she had seen snatched from under the stanch hovel, and, with feet tied and scrawny necks stretched head downward, carried off down the yellow, dusty road to the market for early broilers. Thus the old woman had added by slow degrees to the fund in the curiously stitched handkerchief. Trudging back and forth, back and forth, with indomitable persistence, laden with chickens, or carrying pail after pail of luscious blackberries from the Swamp—or a market basket filled with old-timey ginger-cakes on one arm and her demijohn full of sweet cider swinging from the other—to be sold from the court-house steps on "First Monday."

In winter, the pails held lye, hominy, and various toothsome things, made out of the fat, mast-fed hogs of hers that lived in the Bottom. Countless were the pones of corn-lightbread she had baked and shoats she had barbecued, for the hack loads of boys who came out to the River on Saturday afternoon with cases of beer. Many were the bundles of clothes she had brought the three miles from town—miles that of late years had seemed to grow longer and wearier of progress—and had carried back in a long split basket, white as snow, sweet-smelling, creaseless, except for the dainty crimping of the ruffles that only old-fashioned darkies cling to and new-fashioned ones turn up their noses at as waste of time.

And now it was ended—this labor of love for the memory of the child she had loved with a proud, worshipful love. No need for the smoke to curl steadily heavenward from the stick-and-dirt chimney when snow covered the ground, or to float slowly out over the thick-leaved swamp when summer-time came again. Her work was finished—her hour of triumph was at hand. Before sun-up tomorrow she would be on her way to the town, where already, in the rear of a small shop, crowded with blocks of marble and finished and unfinished grave-stones, there towered above the rest, gleaming, white and beautiful, one bearing the name “Freeman (was he not born out of slavery?) Morton.”

“When dey rides by, gwine on down de big road, en sees dat—den dey’ll know how my Freem’ was lubbed by his ole Mammy.”

She closed her eyes and leaned her turbaned head back against the smooth, splotched bark of the beech tree. She was living over again, as she had done many times, the deep joy of satisfaction that follows the accomplishment of something that would have dismayed and discouraged a soul less brave.

A red-and-white spotted cow came up the road from the Bottom and stood patiently outside the gate, rattling her bell now and then as she threw her head backward to lick a thorn wound on her flank. But the old woman gazed unseeingly out, across and beyond the clearing, where the lone grave was—pride and triumph possessing the lineaments of her face. She moved her hands in quick, decisive gestures, and her lips moved, now and then, convulsively.

So intent was she that she did not see, or seeing, did not heed, the man — scarce more than a boy — who vaulted the rail fence and, rapidly crossing the clearing, ran towards the cabin, excitement in every movement. He came around the corner of the cabin before her gestures ceased. Then she became as rigid as a part of her rude bench. "Hell's to pay!" he said, roughly, a weak, drunken smile fixing itself on his white, dissipated face.

"Cap" Morton, scapegoat — with all that the name implies — drunkard, gambler, and worse — the grandson of old Judge Morton, the last of an old and wealthy family, a boy who had, to use vernacular, "th'owed hisse'f away" — was the only human being who demanded friendship of Aunt Liily. Her bitterness had not inspired him with fear when she had nursed him through his babyhood. He clung to her regardless, and all along the way he had confided his childish, boyish troubles and the devilment of his later years, to her irresponsive ear; never knowing, caring, or perhaps noticing, whether she condemned or sympathized. Time and time again he had fled to her cabin when parental doors were closed, and she had nursed him, stolidly — undoubtedly unwillingly — through certain spreces that had grown to be periodical.

"For God's sake, Mam' Liily," he commanded, "get up! Help me to hide — they'll be after me any minute! — I've — I've," he raised his arm to the side of the cabin door as he went inside, and bowed his head against it, "Good God! I've shot a woman — and killed her!"

The old negress got up and followed him into the cabin. He put his hand on the foot of a bed — seeking a hiding place — and then, wheeling suddenly, he went to the fireplace and, holding to the rude mantelpiece, set his foot firmly in a niche, where a brick was missing and pulled himself up until he could slip his fingers over a loose board in the ceiling, pushing it aside, and then, quickly moving several others, he climbed into the loft.

"Give me a quilt and a pillow — they'll never think about looking up here! Remember the time Freem' set me up here, when me and Pomp were playing hiding? Pompey never did find me."

An expression of pain shot over the old woman's face at the careless mention of her son. She handed him the quilt and pillow — but when she stepped down out of the chair and mechanically pushed it back against the wall there was a look of hatred on her face, so terrible, so intense, that her features were livid. She went to the door and stood, for a long time, looking out toward the grave in the clearing. Finally the man recalled her.

“Mam’ hurry up and fix me something to eat—and a cup of good strong coffee. Had nothing since last night!”

As the sun went down and the cypress knots blazed up the old woman moved about the fire in the yard, preparing supper. There was something indefinable in her manner—something akin to the fierce, tense control of the cat species, when about to spring—or the smooth glide of a deadly snake in ambush. Now and then she looked down the road, and strained her ear to listen. Once she went to the gate and leaned far over, looking beyond the alders and sumac in the fence corners, to catch a glimpse of the black outline of the dead tree which stood between her and the last streak of light in the west. Then her fingers clenched nervously, and a fiendish, malicious smile relaxed her face. She trod softly—once more—back and forth between the cabin and the fire in the yard—only a flapping sole of her worn-out shoes disturbing the silence. After a while she said to the boy in the loft:

“Supper’s raidy—ye might as well come on down en eat—don’t seem lak dey’s comin’ dis way or dey’d done been heah! I’ll watch at de gate.”

“Good thing for me there aren’t any Ku Klux these days, Mam’,” Cap Morton said, stretching himself as he stepped out into the yard. “Woods be full of them by now! Po’ old Freem’ didn’t have much show, did he? They’ll never take me alive!”

A sharp spasm crossed the worn old face at the gate, as she turned from her post to look at the speaker.

His long young body curved like a lithe willow switch as he bent over the table and ravenously devoured the appetizing food. The silhouette of a beautiful profile, a well-shaped brow—a fine, straight nose—short upper lip and strong chin stood out in relief against the flaring cypress knots behind him. She watched him with intense concentration—the quick, nervous movements of his slim hands as he passed them about the table—the long stretch of his legs under the table—the peculiarly graceful turn of his arched foot. For a long time she watched him as he ate. Then she bowed her head on the gate, listening intently. Yes — unmistakably — she heard the sound of horses coming — coming — in the distance. They were coming swiftly, too!

A thrill shot through her! With vicious realism she foresaw the brutal scene that the next half-hour would bring.

Suddenly the boy, straightening his body, threw his chin up and addressed her. She did not hear what he said. In a maze she gazed, bewildered by the overwhelming emotion that that quick movement of the figure and toss of the chin brought to her. It was an odd trick that the Morton family had possessed.

Ah, the familiarity of the loved gesture, and what it recalled to her! Vividly she remembered the same tense stiffening of the long, lithe body—the same imperious tilt of the chin—of her own son, when he dropped lightly from the leafy branches of that same beech tree in answer to the call: “No use, Freem’, we know you’re up there,” and, with oath for oath, had faced undaunted, to the last, the hideous, masked band of Ku Klux that filled the cleanly-swept yard and surrounded the cabin. The remembrance beat on her brain that “Cap” Morton’s father had (with trembling eagerness—a vent to his long pent-up hate) slipped the noose about her son’s neck!

With a sickening gasp for breath, she wavered, and then, throwing up her hands in warning, she slid to the side of the boy, who bounded from the table: “Unc’ Dan!” she said.

In a few seconds they had disappeared in the thick, green cane that bordered the garden fence and that grew a tangled, well-nigh impenetrable brake for miles and miles up and down the river.

“Uncle Dan”—a name that sent uncontrollable terror to the hearts of children, white and black,—was an old hermit, a hoodoo, a witch, a half-savage, half-human creature, who dwelt—no white man knew where, nor for how long, somewhere in the cane-brake—or in the swamp beyond—or somewhere up or down the river—and whose cunning wisdom and lore of woods could foil man or beast, and to whose care before sun-up, Aunt Lily, winding slowly, patiently, in and out along hidden paths—had entrusted her charge!

When she came home about dawn the chickens were fluttering in a preparatory way amongst the peach and plum trees. The cabin door was ajar, the table, the food just as she had left it. The outer gate was closed. Poking up the smouldering embers she sat down on the bench and placed her feet close to the live coals, to dry.

"Don' look lak nobody been heah," she said, wearily, "Wonder if dat was Mist' Geawge Estes gwine fox huntin' las' night?"

Later on, the chickens flew down, and, slipping through the garden paling, shied around and around the table, until finally, the boldest flew up and, snatching a piece of bread, ran squawking away, followed by the rest of the hungry brood.

Emmet Carter, the sheriff, with several deputies, came on down the road, and passed under the dead tree, where, from the topmost branches, a hawk perched and silently watched the broken iron pot, where the old hen still hovered over her chicks.

"Don't see why we didn't think of coming here first," said the sheriff, as he sprang from his horse, and went into the yard. "Bet it's right where 'Cap' is—or was!"

The sun was above the rank growth of the swamp by that time and the first rays, stealing underneath the low branches of the beech tree, fell on Aunt Liily's face.

The faded red turban had slipped down across her shoulders. The curiously stitched and quilted handkerchief she had, tremblingly, stuffed in the pocket of the fugitive when she left him at Uncle Dan's camp. Her white, woolly hair was in strange contrast to her small, shrivelled black face—a face that looked like some curious ebony image, carved in fine lines—a masterpiece from a hand that had wrought with marvellous, divine skill, his conception of Love and Compassion—the powerful beauty of which God himself had enhanced by setting a seal—His greatest, one that is bestowed on the soul that, suffering cruelest wrong and bitterest injustice, is still great enough to forgive—His seal of Peace!

Emmet Carter instinctively took off his hat as he looked down.

The Hired Man's Point of View.*

BY SUSAN KEATING GLASPELL.

THE new hired man was a struggling soul who insisted upon living up to the best and highest that was in him. He cultivated the place by day and the minds of the family by night. The former he irrigated with water and the latter with New Thought. It was assumed early in the acquaintance that he was from Boston, but he himself, with a fine fearlessness one could not but admire, confessed to Boise.

He had come to Lone Prairie through a soulful desire to get nearer to nature. He said it had never been intended man should spend his days in the feverish market-place. Elizabeth, who giggled and was in many ways impossible, said she did not believe one could catch much of a fever in Boise, but the new hired man exercised a beautiful tolerance toward his inferiors. That they were his inferiors they soon came to understand.

His name was Horatio Mackintosh. His clothes were passé and his eye large and wonderful. He was a mechanic by trade and a mystic by soul. He had a way of casting down his knife and fork at unexpected moments and crying out — "Beautiful! Beautiful!" At first they thought he referred to the food, but experience taught them the explosive was caused by things mental rather than things gastronomic.

As the Brown family had never before had a hired man, and as the hired man had never before had a family, they underwent, hand in hand, as he would have put it, the delicate experience of adjusting themselves to one another. The Browns had turned their backs on Chicago, and their faces toward Idaho, because Mr. Brown had a bad cough and it seemed that life as a shipping clerk would be, for him, a very uncertain life. They were a jolly sort of family, and their new existence had seemed a good deal like a prolonged picnic until one day Horatio Mackintosh stopped at the door and said he would work for them. They were not at all sure they wanted any one to work for them, but Horatio, so Tom said afterwards, hit them with a thought wave, and stayed. His arrival took place — that is advisedly put — at two o'clock in the afternoon. He spent the remainder of the day interviewing his soul in order to ascertain whether it would be willing to take up permanent residence there. To do this he sat silently upon the back porch for three consecutive hours. Then he walked into the house and said, with the solemnity of a great deliverance: "The atmosphere is right. I have obtained a consent."

* Copyright, 1907, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. Copyright secured in Great Britain. All rights reserved.

Now the Browns were mere Presbyterians, and as to literature, read only the big sellers and the popular magazines. However, Elizabeth had spent one quarter at the University of Chicago, and she had a faint recollection of having heard something about consent. So she translated the new hired man in this wise: "He thinks we're all right. He's going to stay right with us."

In Chicago the Browns had known the luxury of one small maid, and this one small maid had never partaken of her daily bread at the same time and place as did the family she served. Going upon the erroneous theory that a hired man in Idaho is the same as a maid in Chicago, Mrs. Brown that night blunderingly put down the usual number of plates. But just before the evening meal was served Mr. Mackintosh, following either the call of his soul or the odor of well-done sage chicken, walked into the dining room, pulled back his chair, adjusted his napkin, took up his knife and fork, and leaning sadly upon the table, his eyes hitting a far distance, said with a tender melancholy: "Yes — ah yes, we must make concessions." Mrs. Brown shamefacedly smuggled in another plate, and in the kitchen ensued a heated discussion as to what concessions were referred to. Elizabeth thought it was the concession of the soul to the body, but Tom held that it was the concession of Mr. Mackintosh to the Browns. To the end of days they had the satisfaction of their own conclusions, for Horatio never explained himself. He paid you the compliment of free expression, and if you were unworthy he did not seek to humiliate you with explanations.

Tom, who was much interested in getting the ranch in full swing, thought it would be fitting that evening to talk a little with the new hired man about starting in in the morning to break some more of the land. He was about to say: "I guess you and I will do some breaking in the morning," when the hired man, reaching out a long, lean arm to the west, said in fervid tones: "Yes — ah — yes, may the after-glow of our lives be as clear and lasting and beautiful." And as Tom put it, "How was a fellow going to butt in on that!"

Indeed, it was evident from the first that the hired man's soul was not to be butted in on. The Browns had heretofore associated souls largely with churches and poems, and that made it a little grewsome to feel they were literally floating around over the dinner table and following one down to the field. Elizabeth said she could stand her soul pretty well during the day, but she hoped it would not get in the habit of following her to bed at night. The day after his arrival the hired man went in to town for his library. This consisted of a large box containing books and pamphlets, all of which seemed to deal with souls and atmosphere and struggle. The idea of struggle appeared to predominate. Tom thought that if the hired man would give his soul a rest once in a while he would make better time in the long run. He — Tom — had been on the track team of the Hyde Park High School and he said that nothing was so bad as overtraining, and he was sure there could be nothing in the world quite as awful as an overtrained soul. But it was impossible to talk to the hired man about this, because, whenever you attempted to say anything which would jar on his soul, he commanded his ears not to listen, and never was as fine team-work seen as that done by the hired man's ears and soul.

He believed that you could have anything you wanted by affirming it. As growth was the most precious thing in the world it was growth he affirmed most frequently. He contended that it helped to affirm verbally, and so every night as he rose to go to bed he said: "I have grown a little today," and every morning when he came down to breakfast he announced: "I grew a little in the night."

The Browns were so far behind him in soul life that their attitude naturally became very apologetic. When evening came the hired man would get out various pamphlets and books, take from his pocket a note book in which he wrote some of the most precious thoughts, and settle himself down at the big table in the sitting-room. When sure he was not looking the members of the family would produce newspapers, magazines and books, slide into unobtrusive places and assume a hang-dog look of knowing they did not amount to much. Ever and anon the hired man's soul would burst forth — "True — most precious — I affirm it."

Meanwhile, despite the soul essence which floated about the place the wheat continued to grow and prospects for a good crop were very bright. But there was one thing haunted them night and day; and that thing was grasshoppers. The Browns had always supposed that all grasshoppers lived in Kansas, but after taking up their land they learned there were a few floating around in Idaho. However, the Idaho grasshoppers were supposedly intermittent, and this was not their logical year. A young man from an Eastern University had pronounced them degenerate and had predicted that never again would they appear as beings to be feared. But still the Browns worried, for they were not of the soul stuff which makes life a matter of affirming and denying.

For some reason best known to themselves, the grasshoppers overlooked their schedule and suddenly appeared at a ranch just five miles north of the Browns. It was Tom who brought the news, and a very serious-faced Tom was he. "They're headed right for us," he concluded. "We're bound to get them."

Someway no one felt like saying anything just then. The silence might have lasted a long time had there not come from the hired man a slow, weighty: "I — deny — it."

Elizabeth laughed hysterically, and with much emphasis Tom said: "Rot!" adding, with an aggressiveness born of his disappointment: "I guess if you can work that stuff on grasshoppers you've got a steady job for life."

"We've got such a little bit of wheat," mourned Elizabeth, "that I should think they might have the decency to let it alone."

"Don't talk to the old-timers here about decency in a grasshopper," sniffed Tom.

"Well, it's very strange to me," she declared, heatedly, "that these precious old-timers don't know anything to do but just sit still and let the grasshoppers take their crop! Why don't they get up and do something about it?"

"Nothing to do," replied Tom, with a splendid masculine acceptance of the inevitable.

The hired man turned to leave the room. At the door he paused, faced them, raised his hand, and again in the manner of a judge pronouncing sentence, or of a minister declaring the bond, he said: "I — deny — it."

"Say," said Tom, "isn't he just the daffiest?"

There was gloom that night in the house of Brown. They had not broken a great deal of their ground that first year, for the breaking of ground demands capital, but, as Elizabeth said: "The fact that we haven't much makes what we have just that much more important to us." A neighboring rancher came in during the evening and they had the melancholy pleasure of obtaining much information concerning the methods of grasshoppers. All they learned but served to deepen their hopelessness. It seemed the universal verdict of the old timers on Lone Prairie that there was nothing to be done about it. After the neighbor had departed the family sat there in silence for some time, thinking a good many things they were too plucky to put into words. At last the hired man began gathering up his papers. After he had risen and pushed back his chair he said, each word falling with an individual solemnity: "I — deny — it."

"Why, he forgot to affirm growth," said Elizabeth.

"Yes," said Tom, "he's cutting out growth tonight and using all his soul to deny the grasshoppers. Good of him, isn't it?"

They laughed a little, but the situation was not to be enlivened, even by the hired man's soul.

Elizabeth slept very little that night; the cares of the family were resting heavily upon her. "It isn't fair," she kept saying, "when we need it so badly, and when we've done our part." And over and over again she told herself: "We ought to do something!"

She was up early next morning and walked out toward the wheat to see if there were any forerunners of the grasshoppers. She did see some half dozen of them, and her heart sank. "They're coming," she said, a great lump in her throat, "they're probably in Mr. Mason's field now."

And then she heard a strange sound, and turned around. The hired man was standing just behind her. His arms were outstretched, palms upward, and in the manner of a child learning phonetic spelling he was saying: "B-a-c-k!"

Elizabeth laughed a little, cried a little, and ran back to the house. "Well, I don't care," she declared, in telling Tom about it, "it's crazy, I know, but at any rate he's doing something. He thinks that's the right thing to do, and he's doing it. And I do think we ought to do something ourselves, and not sit here like mummies and let the grasshoppers rush in and take all we've got!"

"Nothing to do," repeated Tom. "If there is the folks here don't know about it, and we're nothing but city jays, and we certainly can't do anything if they can't. The wheat's not ready to cut, and there you are."

Mr. Mason came over after breakfast to say that his wheat field was so thick with hoppers he did not believe he could get a pin head in between them. "Well, what I'd like to know," blazed Elizabeth, when he had finished, "is how you can sit there and be so mighty calm about it!"

He turned to her in astonishment. "Well—why, what are you going to do?"

"Do? How do I know? But I think it's pretty strange to sit still and let a thing go without any kind of a fight!"

He shook his head. "Ranchin' in a 'hopper country is a good deal of a gamble. I've had a crop for two years—this year I get no crop. You take your chances when you take the land. Oh—we old-timers keep pretty cool about it," he concluded, smiling tolerantly upon her.

"But I think it's outrageous to keep cool about it! I want to do something! Why, I'd do anything—anything, rather than do nothing!"

She heard an imperative cough, and turned to see Horatio Maekintosh observing her meaningly. He turned, and walked out on the back porch. After a minute of hesitation she followed.

"Mind rules matter," was his opening sentence.

Elizabeth sat down on a box, determined to hear him out.

"But when a large amount of matter is involved it takes a certain amount of mind to dominate it. You follow me?"

"I—I think so," said Elizabeth, meekly.

"I find, despite my most earnest efforts, that I alone cannot create an atmosphere sufficiently strong to drive back those approaching grasshoppers. If the thought waves denying them—sending them back—were stronger, the grasshoppers would be obstructed as completely as if a mighty iron wall were built from earth to heaven. You get that?" he asked, solicitously.

Elizabeth looked around to make sure no one was within hearing. "Yes," she murmured, "I get it."

"You say you would do anything rather than do nothing. Then, despite your unbelief and ignorance, come out here with me and deny these grasshoppers!"

Elizabeth, struggling with both tears and laughter, could at first find no words. "I—I'm afraid I wouldn't do any good," she said at last. "I—you see, I don't just understand how to use my mind."

"Concentrate all your thought upon sending them back,—say back, think back, feel back. Send out your soul to deny them—let the vibrations which you control go forth against them, and then—when they strike our thought wave they will simply turn and fly the other way! With such an atmosphere as we two can create"—he held up his hand to solemnize the declaration—"the victory is won."

Elizabeth's mental processes were now something like this—It sounds foolish—but how do I know? Lots of people besides him believe it. And there's nothing so foolish as doing nothing when you ought to be doing something, and nobody else knows anything at all to do, so, even if he is foolish, he isn't as foolish as everybody else. And, as the woman in the flat above us said about Christian Science when her baby was dying—"I'm willing to try anything that can't make things any worse."

Anyway, after one long glance across that wheat field, out of which had floated many a dream, Elizabeth went. And when Elizabeth went into a thing she went into it right. She was a courageous maiden, courageous enough to brave even her own ridicule, and she was what Tom called gamey. If she was going to try this thing at all she was going to give it a square deal; if it failed it should not be because she had not done it right. And so, at cost of never again being able to take herself seriously, she stood as the hired man told her to stand, arms outstretched, palms upward, and in a voice which seemed to come from very deep in her being she breathed, weightily, forcefully — "Back! — Back!"

She soon became so interested in seeing how many thought waves she could send out that she forgot all about being ridiculous. Harder and harder she worked to get the vibrations in motion against the grasshoppers. There were a number of them scattered about just beyond the fence, and the field which they could see a little way ahead was fairly a moving mass. The sight of them added much to her intensity. In the natural course of events, according to Mr. Mason's story, the grasshoppers would be upon them in half an hour. Faster — faster she rolled out the thought waves. "Back — Back!" she breathed, and "Back — Back!" came from the soul of the hired man, her compatriot in the creation of an anti-grasshopper atmosphere.

So completely was her mind used in the denying of the grasshoppers that she never knew anything about the storm until the wind almost took her off her feet. Even then she was hardly conscious that it was wind. It seemed as if other thought waves were being marshalled to their aid, as if some mighty force were pushing them right on to the grasshoppers, — denying them, sending them back. Every bit of her being was concentrated now in the "Back — Back!" and Elizabeth's soul was working at full pressure.

But when the first bit of hail — hail about the size of an unpretentious egg — hit her square in the back of the neck, she forgot all about vibrations and turned around. Then she saw it as it was. A terrible storm had come up. Clouds from all directions were hanging low in the sky, the wind was blowing furiously and the hail was coming faster and faster, bigger and bigger.

And yet Elizabeth did not quite surrender. "Oh, back," she cried — "back!" But the note of the imperative had gone; it was nothing now but a pathetic plea. She looked at the hired man; he had not abated. "Back — Back!" she wailed. But the sobs were coming, — and so was the hail. Thicker and faster it came, until at last, utterly panic-stricken and sick at heart, Elizabeth covered her head with her arms and ran for the house.

Tom was coming after her. "Where — where you been?" he gasped. "It — it's awful."

"I — I — just taking a little walk," screamed Elizabeth. "I — I wasn't doing anything at all!"

When the storm abated they looked out on a stricken wheat field. "I'm glad the beastly hoppers didn't get it," said Tom, trying to whistle. "I'd rather be beaten by hail than hoppers."

It was a few minutes later that Elizabeth saw a strange figure coming across the yard. It was Horatio Mackintosh, but a very demolished hired man was he. The wind and hail had done strange things to him.

He came hurrying into the room — Elizabeth was thankful Tom had just left — holding out to her an enthusiastic hand. "A magnificent victory!" he cried, his face glowing, his voice jubilant, — "magnificent!"

"Why, what in the world are you talking about?" demanded Elizabeth.

"Our glorious triumph! Our unqualified success!"

Elizabeth gasped. "Are you crazy, man? Haven't you any sense at all? Look out there at that field! Where does the triumph come in?"

Horatio Mackintosh waved both of his arms with the full abandon of the victor. "The grasshoppers have turned back! There is not one in the field! Most of them have even perished! They have not only turned back — they have died!"

"Well, what if they have?" blazed Elizabeth. "What difference does it make? There isn't any crop for them anyway. I tell you the crop is ruined."

He looked at her then with a pitying tolerance. "My dear young lady," he explained, with the gentle patience of a high soul, "that is quite without bearing on the issue. We did not affirm a crop; we merely denied the grasshoppers." And he turned away murmuring softly — "Wonderful — most precious!"

The Finding of the Fledgeling.*

BY SHANNON BIRCH.

THE camp-fires were dying at intervals along the trail that led up the eastern slope of the mountains, to the pass that hid the restless prospectors from the new-found wealth of Nuggeton, lying in the gullehes at the foot of the western slope of the mountains where rose the head-waters of the Fever River.

The bustle of preparation to move forward was going on along the upward trail, and wheeling into the tortuous course was many a covered wagon, whose driver, bent on urging his team to its execrable task of surmounting the insurmountable, forgot for the moment his dreams of wealth.

The wagons, composing the largest camp on the trail, had one by one been driven forward from their camping ground on their journey up the mountain side, except one, whose owner, left alone, mounted his wagon, and, without hesitation, took the trail down the mountain. The train soon discovered his secession, and the leader of the camp rode hastily back and soon overtook the recalcitrant, who failed to give any explanation of his departure. As no camp rule had been broken, he was permitted to move on down the mountain-side, and arrived in the middle of the day at the last camping place next to the one where he had separated from the train. Arriving at this point the traveler unhitched his team, with the evident design of remaining in his location for some length of time.

Thomas Wickersham had long been a citizen of Grass Valley, in the new country of Kansas, before he began to depart from his customary habits of slumber and dream, time after time, that he was engaged in felling a giant tree whose decayed interior was the receptacle of an immense hoard of virgin gold. Beyond the fact that his dream occurred with great persistency, Thomas Wickersham was unable to go in explanation of this phenomenon. His mind had not dwelt on the possession of gold above his neighbors. What surprised him greatly was the photographic likeness of one dream to another,—always the same surroundings, the same landscape, the same mountains, the same ravine, with the same great tree leaning above it, himself sinking his axe deep into the fibres of the tree, its fall, and the pebbly gold that ran from the hollow and spread in a mighty heap upon the ground,—ecstatic possession of illimitable wealth, that vanished with the banishment of sleep.

* Copyright, 1907, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. Copyright secured in Great Britain. All rights reserved.

This having, and then not having, wore on Thomas Wickersham, whose attention, no doubt, was the more deeply engaged in a coincidental matter because of it. This matter was the sudden discovery of gold fields of unusual richness at Aladdin Creek, one of the head-waters of Fever River, west, beyond the mountains.

Thomas Wickersham's auriferous dream must have aroused in him an adventurous spirit, for he was possessed at once with a determination to try his fortunes in the gold-fields, and the expiration of a few short weeks saw him rolling westward in company with other emigrants, in a train of canvas-covered wagons, bound to the Eldorado of Aladdin Creek.

It was Thomas Wickersham who returned to the abandoned camp, because it was the place of his dream, every feature coinciding with its detail. The discovery had been unexpected. Chosen to ride ahead to locate the place selected for the camping ground for the night, Wickersham had suddenly found himself face to face with a place as familiar to him as the country lying around Grass Valley. During the night he determined to move with the train a day's journey up the mountains, beyond the fear of inquisitive companions, and then return to probe the mystery.

The day on which he arrived back, and more than half the following day, were spent in preparing for effective investigation. First the great tree was to be felled, and if no shower of gold came of that, then something else might be done. Having selected his point of attack, he swung his axe, that fell, biting keenly into its trunk. To contemplate the possibilities before him, he let his hands fall from the axe-helve, that stood stiffly out from the tree, and stepped back a pace.

While regarding the situation in this contemplative spirit, he caught sight of a covered wagon driven down-trail toward his camp. He remained inactive, awaiting the passage of the wagon and its occupant. That did not occur. The wagon, instead, drew in and came to a stand-still. The driver dismounted and approached, glancing curiously at the axe extended from the tree. He greeted Thomas Wickersham, who returned the greeting, and then simply stood waiting.

That the late-comer had some purpose in view not disclosed was clearly evident, but he seemed unable to proceed with the explanation that evidently was expected, the more so as the two men had been members of the same train, bound for Aladdin Creek, the last-comer having fallen in some six days back from the mountains. This last-comer, the elder of the two by several years, seemed greatly embarrassed, but at length said:

"I clearly perceive that you are entitled to the reasons for my appearing here, but I must say that I am at a loss to state them, not so much because they are not clear to me, as by reason of the unexpected appearance here of fulfillment of certain designs by another that I supposed could only possibly be entertained by myself.

"I find that you have proceeded here to the same extent and practically in the same manner I had designed to do, even to your beginning to fell the tree before us. You have preceded me here, and are entitled to the rights of a prior possessor. I will state my case, and we can then decide to what extent it interferes with any claims you may have and desire to retain:

"I am a farmer, as you may conjecture, and my home is at Rapid Jack, in Nebraska. The gold fever that has swept the West found me distracted from my usual routine of duties by the frequent occurrence of a dream that presented each time the same features, never deviating, of a mountain scene, crossed by a ravine in which stood a huge tree, that I felled and found hollow, but filled with gold that flowed out at my feet. In possessing myself of this treasure, I invariably awoke. It must, of course, be clear to you that the tree you have begun to fell is the tree of my dream."

Thomas Wickersham listened to this revelation with amazement, and it was no sooner concluded than he related his own experience, and it was promptly concluded between them that the search should be conducted jointly.

The team was unhitched and provided for, the elder man drew from his wagon an axe, and the two men approached the tree where the handle of Thomas Wickersham's axe still stood out at right-angles to the trunk. The elder one said:

"I observe by your axe that you chop left-handed; I am a right-handed chopper; I will stand opposite, so we can double-team and strike time-about."

The younger man, assenting, drew out his axe and simply exclaiming, "Chip in!" struck the tree a blow that was followed by a stroke from the other, alternating until a considerable notch was hacked in the trunk of the tree. Then the elder suddenly exclaimed, "Chip!" and followed this by sinking his axe above the notch, so as to chip out between.

The elder at once withdrew his axe as that of the younger sank in the gash, but the younger failed to withdraw his implement,—failed even to attempt to draw it,—and, crashing upon the head of the one in the tree, showering sparks of fire, fell the edge of the descending axe of the elder, who looked quickly up, to be met by an unaccountable look on the face of the younger, who staggered forward, shouted:

"Bob!"

The younger was almost instantly met by the elder, with the joyous cry:

"Tommy!"

Salathiel Wickersham had settled early on the Mississippi Bottom, in Illinois, and had, with the indoor aid and assistance of his spouse, Louisa Ellen, literally hewed a farm from the primeval woods, when Robert and Thomas, their sons, arrived, respectively, at the ages of twenty and seventeen.

Salathiel Wickersham had become a prosperous land-owner, and his family shared with him his prosperity. Louisa Ellen's hospitality and Salathiel's abundance were famed for miles around. The boys, Robert and Thomas, worked about the farm, and apparently never knew discontent. Much of their labor had been expended on the clearings that from time to time turned the forest into plow-land, and they would attack the largest trees and fell them. Robert chopped with the right hand nearest the axe, while Thomas was left-handed. This arrangement enabled them to "double-team," standing opposite while striking alternate blows, one lifting his axe as the other sunk his in the trunk of the tree.

The boys were inseparable in work and play, although there was a difference of three years in their ages. Robert was slow, like his father—Thomas, independent and impulsive, like his mother, Louisa Ellen, whose baby and ewe-lamb he always was.

It was on a notable September day, as Robert and Thomas were double-teaming on a sturdy hickory, that Robert, in response to Tommy's "chip in," fell to and the two soon notched a base away from the chip. Then Robert, following his cry of "chip!" sunk his axe above the notch, followed by Thomas's axe, that fell in the gash made by Robert's axe, and remained embedded there, for Thomas had suddenly formed a resolution—had reached a mental climax—and forgetting the time and place, allowed Robert's descending axe to fall on his, and throw around a shower of sparks. Tommy, without further ado, and without withdrawing his axe, ceased work and went to the house.

This was the last time (for the next morning Tommy was gone) that these brothers raised an axe together until twenty years had expired, and a sudden thought again stayed the arm of Thomas, and again smashed down the axe of Robert, in the mountains of Colorado, where they were led to see again the long ago, and to remember that they were brothers.

A fledgeling of the Wickersham nest had flown away; it seemed for good. Salathiel said he would return when he had tried his wings. He looked for him soon, as he knew it did not take an age for Tommy to get hungry. Any remarks, however, about Tommy's hunger were kept from Louisa Ellen, who dreamed of nothing else from one baking to another.

Within two years Salathiel was called to his fathers, and his last thoughts were of Tommy.

Louisa Ellen remained with Robert, and gently hoped and prayed for Tommy's return, until six years more had passed, when she, pining for Tommy, died. With her last breath she urged Robert to find Tommy, and Robert promised.

At the expiration of two years more—ten years in all since Tommy departed—Robert sold the farm, and moved West, never ceasing the search for Tommy. Time went by without results until Robert had been in the West ten years, always looking for Tommy.

Then came the dreams, and the meeting that spanned the River of Years, and achieved in a twinkling the realization of Louisa Ellen's gentle hope.

A Pair of Dead-Beats.*

BY JUNA PAPWORTH.

SOUTH-BOUND train puffed, snorted, and clanged out of the Atlanta depot. With increasing velocity, it effected a circuitous route through clattering freight trains and lumber yards, and proceeding with warning bell through outlying districts of negro shanties, speedily attained an open country of tall pine and scrub palmetto.

The occupants of the Florida Pullman disposed themselves for a long ride. Bags and umbrellas were tossed overhead, hats were replaced by caps, and handkerchiefs tucked thriftily around immaculate collars; sundry windows were raised or lowered, pillows and periodicals produced, and by the time the car was speeding by gaping villages with the pride and privilege of a "fast mail," it had assumed the comfortable aspect of a permanent residence.

The American traveller being a sociable animal, and pine trees and telegraph poles waxing monotonous, the passengers shortly began to take notice of one another. A child in Section 1 swallowed his whistle and became inconsolable — whether from the inconvenience of its loss or location could not be ascertained. However, the good woman in Section 2, proffering her experienced services to the weary mother, brought comfort to the afflicted. A sally to the water cooler from No. 5, and an incidental stumble over a valise in the line of progress instigated a discussion with No. 3 on narrowly averted catastrophes, the Fall of China, and other weighty matters. A pack of cards was the signal for a game of whist by the gentlemen of 4, 6, 7, and 8, respectively. While No. 9, deeming the respectable shelter of a palace car sufficient introduction for all practical purposes, leaned on his pougee elbow, over the aisle, and addressed No. 10.

* Copyright, 1907, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. Copyright secured in Great Britain. All rights reserved. The writer of this story received a cash prize of $100 in THE BLACK CAT story competition ending October 19, 1904.

"Been attending the exposition, ma'am?"

"Yes," she answered laconically.

"See our fair at Chicago?"

She smiled slightly and shook her head.

"It made Atlanta look like a Brownie by the Colossus of Rhodes."

"So I have heard." She spoke in a soft, low voice that compelled him to exert some effort to catch her remarks. The fact that she in no way aided or abetted the conversation daunted him not a bit. There was, to be sure, a breezy assurance about his whole personality that precluded the idea of his being daunted by anything short of a roaring lion. Certainly the small gentlewoman with the weak voice had no terrors for him, and the possibility that she might consider him "fresh" did not penetrate his genial mind.

"Fairly good crowd at Atlanta," he continued, anxious to concede something: "The railroads issued round-trip excursion tickets for one-fare rates. Do you know, the scalpers are selling these return tickets out of Atlanta for mere songs? "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-aye" would purchase transportation to Timbuctoo."

"Yes," she questioned politely.

"Sure! A fellow has but to be John Smith, or whoever the ticket names, and, if he is put off, he has a good lawsuit against the company. The railroads, I gather, are putting people off every trip, and lawyers in Atlanta are making a business of collecting damage suits."

"Will they win them?"

"It will be interesting to know. I take it the Georgia Legislature is more or less controlled by the railroad interests, and that the people are down on railroads on this account. Popular sentiment is always against the corporation, anyway; a man who would not appropriate an egg, laid on his own door-step by a neighboring hen, would beat his way on a train and feel he had struck a blow for 'life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.'"

At this point in the monologue, which was conducted in a clear, strong voice, the occupant of Section 11 smiled into her book. Number 11 had maintained that complete unconsciousness of neighbors born of residence in an Eastern metropolis. That she hailed from such metropolis the recent mode of her tailor gown and the smartness of her hat further proclaimed. Number 11 was, moreover, young and good-looking, with a quiet elegance of person and attire from a well-dressed coil of rich brown hair to a shapely foot in the correct mannish shoe.

"Tickets, please!" The conductor was collecting fares. There was something important about this conductor; you felt, at once, that he would brook no trifling. A tall, lank, Southerner, of somewhat gloomy visage, he scrutinized each ticket with the severity of a magistrate; for one solemn moment, its fate seemed to hang in the balance; then it was punched "with care."

The whist players of Section 6 to a man were subjected to an extra suspicion, owing to their having excursion tickets; but, as their baggage was correctly marked, and letters protruded, conspicuously, from outside pockets, they escaped question. The Chicagoan and lady opposite had straight tickets, while the young lady in Section 11 presented a pass. This was not surprising; she looked like a person whose journey through life was smooth and who travelled on passes. The conductor lost some of his austerity in her presence, and, at the sight of the pass, melted completely. He merely gave it a glance — it being above suspicion — but in that glance, his eye caught a name; he looked surprised, then his face was transformed by the most effusive of smiles. Off came his cap, and he bowed low with true Southern courtesy.

"I am happy to meet you, Mrs. McCarty," he said. "I have the honor of introducing myself; I am Jack Boyd." After this information, evidently intended to produce a sensation, he paused for the effect.

That a sensation was produced there could be no doubt; in fact, several of them had chased each other over the guileless features of Mrs. McCarty. At first, her eyes widened in surprise, then showed a mild alarm; she then, in turn, looked annoyed, relieved, and nonplussed.

"You have heard Charlie speak of Boyd, haven't you? Captain Boyd?" he continued.

For an instant only perplexity reigned in the lady's eyes, then they were lit by a flash of light; she bit her lips in an endeavor to hide something akin to amusement; and a small gloved hand was extended with no lack of cordiality. "Yes, indeed; I am delighted to meet you, Captain Boyd."

"Well, I declare!" he sank on the opposite seat and seemed loath to let go the hand committed to him; "Charlie never mentioned your coming South."

"He did not know I was coming — that is — I left home — rather unexpectedly," she answered, somewhat incoherently.

"To think of you-all being on my train! Charlie said he had married a stunning girl, but 'Love is blind,' you know, and I never reckoned — Where's the baby?" he broke off suddenly; but the train slowed down for a station, so he excused himself with a "see you later."

In a few moments he was back, and fell into his former seat with an assurance warranted by a mutual love for "Charlie." "There's going to be some fun in a minute," he leaned over and whispered. "That fellow across the aisle has a scalper's ticket; I have inside information about him, and I am going to put him off."

She looked startled, and bent an inquiring glance toward Section 12. She saw a young man reading a voluminous newspaper; he seemed unconscious of brewing trouble.

"You know Charlie sent me your photograph in your wedding dress" — the little matter of throwing a gentleman off the train could evidently wait — "but I never got it."

She caught her breath.

"Going to Florida?"

"Yes."

"But where is Geraldine?"

"Geraldine? Why, — Geraldine is very busy this winter."

"Busy? Shaking rattle boxes and playing with her toes?"

She looked confused. "You mean the baby? I thought you referred to the aunt she was named for. The baby is with her grandmother."

"Oh! You modern mothers!!! " He shook a playful finger at her.

She blushed furiously.

"By the way, how is The General?"

"Quite well, thank you," she replied cheerfully.

"The General never had any use for me; he used to get furious when I came around."

"He is a little hasty, sometimes, toward every one," she apologized.

The conductor laughed heartily. "Hasty is good! He was a little too hasty the time he caught my finger." He displayed a curious scar above the nail of the right forefinger, which she examined with interest, and then, as she was expected to say something, she ventured in the light of this revelation. "The General ran away last week."

"RAN! Can he do that?" He threw back his head and bellowed at the idea. "He had several hours start, didn't he?"

"Well, for his age, he can make first-rate time." This remark, though nicely calculated to fit early youth or tottering senility, still seemed to have something amiss.

"Oh, The General is in his prime yet; he has not been in the family more than fifty years or so."

Someway, The General suddenly seemed to lose interest for her, and she fell to musing on the longevity of crocodiles.

"Does he swear as badly as ever?"

"For a parrot with an uncertain early training," she replied, with recovered animation, "he might be more profane."

The train slackened speed and, rising with a nod, as who should say: "I go, but I will return," he left the car. Mrs. McCarty cast a look of friendly interest across the aisle; but her neighbor had such an air of easy confidence that her glance contained more of appeal than commiseration.

When the conductor returned he proceeded at once, with a knowing look at Mrs. McCarty, to ask No. 12 for his ticket.

"Are you J. B. Johnson?" This was in a tone very different from the one he had used to her.

"I go by that name," said No. 12, pleasantly.

"I will have to have some further assurance of that than your word."

Mr. Johnson looked grieved, but put down his paper good-naturedly. "Must have left my letters in my other coat," he observed complacently, after a fruitless search of his pockets.

The conductor laughed ominously. "You will have to be identified someway," he insisted.

"Certainly!" Mr. Johnson leaned over and waved his hand, with happily placed confidence, in the direction of the Chicagoan: "This gentleman will identify me."

"Sure!" exclaimed the individual so unexpectedly appealed to;
"He is J. B. Johnson."

"How long have you known that?" sarcastically.

"About ten years, — hey, Jim?"

Jim opined it had been about that long, and resumed his paper as though the subject were closed, amid laughter throughout the car.

"One identification don't go," said the flushed conductor.

As by one simultaneous impulse, the whist players of No. 6 were on their feet and stalking down the aisle. "Is it Jim Johnson you want identified?" said the first, "I thought everybody on the road knew Jim." He shook hands heartily.

"Didn't see you, my boy," said the second.

"Thought there was something familiar about the name, Johnson," chimed in the third. The last greeting was lost in the general uproar; while the little girl from No. 1 slipped off the Chicagoan's knee, came timidly forward, and, with an encouraging nod from him, piped in a clear treble: "How de do, Uncle Jim?"

The door slammed on the irate conductor, and Mr. Johnson touched the button.

His passengers were quite generally indulging in refreshing beverages, and the children were smeared with candy, when the captain returned. There was trouble in his eye, and he addressed the car in stentorian tones.

"Will the gentlemen who have so kindly identified this person as J. B. Johnson now hear the description of J. B. Johnson furnished by the general passenger agent, who knows the party personally. "Small blonde woman," he read impressively, "yellow hair, blue eyes, five feet two and weighs one hundred and ten pounds." He folded his arms and confronted Mr. Johnson like an avenging nemesis. "What have you to say to that, sir?"

"The description flatters me a little, I fear," said that gentleman, modestly, "but it seems all right."

"Why! Great Shade of Munchausen!! This is a woman!"

"Yes," he acquiesced placidly, "I am the new woman."

The car was indecently hilarious.

"You will have to pay your fare, sir."

"Now, I give you my word I have paid my fare once, otherwise I would take great pleasure in obliging you." Nothing could be more courteous than his tone.

"Get your witnesses for your lawsuit, then; off you-all go at the next station."

"Please don't worry about a damage suit," said Johnson sweetly, "I would never cause trouble for a man doing his duty, and I can quite see, from your point of view, that you are obliged to be aggressive."

Boyd was the bigger man and his southern pride and anger were aroused; but certain alert movements of his antagonist — an erect carriage of the head and lithe figure — suggested a training that gave him "pause." He glanced at Mrs. McCarty. That discreet lady was giving her attention to palm-leaf fans with an absorption that deepened with each ten million passed. Boyd bolted, but returned almost immediately with two stalwart brakemen, who proceeded to lay hands on "the new woman" in no very respectful style.

What would have occurred then will never be known, for an unlooked-for interruption occurred. Mrs. McCarty rose suddenly and grasped the conductor's arm.

"Captain Boyd," she said, with considerable dignity, "this joke has gone far enough; I can identify Mr. Johnson myself." Her tone, while gracious and polite, was final and admitted of no dispute. "I fear you will be terribly angry," she faltered apologetically, "but it was all so funny" — she laughed a trifle hysterically — "that I helped the joke along. I do not want him actually put off, however," she added, not without crimsoning, "because Charlie put me — in — his care — on the journey."

"Back to the woods, boys," he roared to the brakemen. "Madam," he bowed low, "the word of C. P. McCarty's wife is law on this train." With a purple face, vanished the conductor, to appear in that car no more that day.

Mrs. McCarty and Mr. Johnson stood confronting one another. Her eyes held an embarrassed appeal, and his, wonder, amusement and admiration. "Why did you do it?" he demanded sternly.

"I could not see you put off."

"Why not? I deserved it."

"H-u-s-h," she warned, for he appeared oblivious to the others.

"I am a fraud, a rogue," he continued regardless, "and utterly beneath your notice."

"Don't," she wailed in a stage whisper. "The more you abuse yourself the more culpable you make me feel. You see I am as gigantic a fraud as yourself. I am not Mrs. Charlie McCarty at all. I never even saw Charlie." She threw out both hands in the utter self-abasement of the confession. The other fraud stared incredulously. Then they both laughed, a laugh which bridged, with one span, a sea of formality.

Now, they could not stand in the aisle, and there was so much she wanted to explain. She hesitated an instant, then waved him to the seat lately occupied by the conductor, where he said :

"I cannot adequately express my obligation to you."

"There is no obligation; I could not ride on guiltily after you were put off; this is but the honor that obtains among thieves. Besides, it is necessary to rid myself of this conductor; he took me for a board of information on parrots and babies; one could not live up to it. "Oh dear!" she sighed tragically. "How the first false step entails an endless train of guilt. I merely availed myself of this pass, and then needs must tell more falsehoods than my conscience can ever acquit; and now, here I am talking to you. Facilis est descensus Averni."

"Thank you."

"But we have not been introduced." In her conventional code this was the culmination of her crimes.

He prepared to retire to his own section.

"Don't go," she pleaded inconsistently.

He sat down.

"If he was not such a gentleman," she mused, "but he is so respectful, and does not in the least presume upon my public avowal of friendship, that I fear he might think I was conceited and silly enough to think—that he might think—" she lost herself in the ramifications of what he might think. Mrs. McCarty, she told him, was a school friend whom she met quite by accident at the Exposition. Her husband was a conductor on the L. & N. Road and, as she had abandoned her trip farther South, she urged her friend to use her pass.

On his part, he explained that he had actually paid full price for his ticket to the little blonde woman, just to accommodate ; but he claimed no extenuating circumstances on this account. Lunch was ordered for two, and he became quite gay when she removed her left glove and disclosed no band of gold entrammelling the third finger. It transpired that her name was Pauline Holland, her home New York, and that she expected to meet in Jacksonville an uncle and aunt returning from Cuba. He was from Hartford, Connecticut ; his name, Richard Clifford ; and he was bound for a sporting trip down the Indian River.

The train was belated and reached Jacksonville quite after dark. To Miss Holland's consternation, no uncle nor aunt were at the station to meet her. Mr. Clifford, before boarding his train for the east coast, established her in a delapidated vehicle termed "carriage" by the profession of shabby darkies infesting the station. He handed her a card bearing his addresses for the winter, and a permanent one, and stated that he was at her service "so long as they both should live." Should she ever "be in trouble or need a friend," he told her earnestly, he would "come at her bidding, though land and seas divide." "The winds would be left behind in the speed of his desire."

She had a curious sense of loss as he raised his hat and strode away through the electric light. Of course she would never send for him, a perfect stranger—that was absurd. And, of course, she would never see him again. They were "ships that pass in the night"—a friendly greeting ; a few waves of thought that reach out and intermingle ; and then, to cross each other's path no more in life's vast ocean. That was all, of course. And yet—she felt unaccountably depressed. She was not rendered less forlorn by the telegram awaiting her at the hotel.

ABOARD the MASCOT, PORT TAMPA, FLA.
November 27, 1886.

MISS PAULINE HOLLAND :—

Yellow fever aboard. Quarantined 20 days. Await us at Jacksonville.

J. P. HOLLAND.

As the tourist season had not begun, the fashionable hotels of the city were closed, and the Hollands had selected for their sojourn a small, unpretentious hostelry. The office being something of a ladies' parlor as well, Miss Holland stepped boldly to the desk and registered. Then, explaining the detention of her friends, she endorsed a draft on New York for one hundred dollars, which the proprietor obligingly cashed.

As she turned away and followed the shambling porter and her dress suit case to her room, she failed to observe a man point her out to a group in the office; and failed, also, to see him examine the register with evident astonishment. What she did see, however, a little later, at the supper table, and which suddenly robbed that repast of its anticipated enjoyment, was, peering at her, under a pair of bushy brows, not ten feet away, — the amused, triumphant, and somewhat malicious eyes of "the conductor."

That night a message sped over the wire to St. Augustine to Richard Clifford, signed Pauline Holland, saying: "In trouble."

There were several things for him to do when he arrived in the morning. Miss Holland told of her predicament with her usual composure, and then, feeling there was no longer occasion for effort on her part, she promptly fainted away. There was a doctor to summon and a nurse to install. There was the travelling salesman to thank, who, displaying more perspicacity than the hotel proprietor, had proffered bail, and saved Miss Holland a night in the station house. There was the proprietor himself to interview, and persuade to withdraw his charge of forgery; which he readily agreed to do when Clifford cashed the draft. Together they sought the city magistrate and asked him to dismiss the case. That official was not to be persuaded, however. A Court of Justice, he held, was not a collecting agency. The fact that a third party paid the money made the forger none the less guilty. The party had confessed she bore another name than the one signed. The case would have to come up in its regular order. "Could Mr. Clifford identify the party as Pauline Holland?" Alas, it was with mortification that Clifford remembered he could claim an acquaintance of but twenty-four hours, during which time she had borne two names, to which he had but her word she was entitled.

Captain Boyd, it was ascertained, had left town; he had disappeared the night before, after introducing Mrs. McCarty to a dozen persons. Clifford mailed the draft to the New York bank with instructions to wire the authenticity of the signature. He then took a train for Atlanta, for which destination he provided himself with a straight, full-priced, bona-fide, gilt-edged, irreproachable, unimpeachable ticket.

"I suppose you are aware that your wife loaned her pass to Jacksonville to Miss Holland." Clifford addressed Captain C. P. McCarty, whom he had traced to the exposition by a convention of Railway Conductors. He found him on a promenade, in the act of haranguing a crowd of blue-coats on the obligation of employees to work only for the interests of the corporation.

"The devil, she did!" said McCarty, with far from a good grace. In fact, to Clifford's surprise, the story of Miss Holland's trouble did not appeal to McCarty so much as the consequences to himself, should the affair be known. He could be neither urged nor coerced into taking any action. Even the contemplation of his own wife's position failed to move him.

"Consider," reminded Clifford, "Mrs. McCarty is now held to be a frisky young matron off on — a kind — of toot."

"Damn it! Let her toot!" This was not nice, but Charlie was mad. "She will toot all right if I lose my job," he affirmed.

Clifford, all undismayed, was casting about for new inspiration, when Good Fortune, ever enamoured of the cheerful and sanguine, smiled lovingly upon him. In the distance arose the crescendo strains of martial music, while from surrounding buildings, like disturbed bees, swarmed sightseers to view the parade of Sousa and his popular band. Two conductors came out of the transportation building, and from the opposite way, rapidly pushing a go-cart, hastened a plump young matron. The conductors and the plump young matron spied McCarty and made for him simultaneously. She stood on her toes for a kiss, while the occupant of the go-cart extended a pair of chubby arms, and kicked and squirmed and gurgled with unmistakable glee.

"Good morning, Captain Ross," to one of the conductors, "Can't 'oo frow 'im a kith, darlin'? — Doesn't she look like Charlie?"

There was no denying that the baby did look like Charlie. As for Charlie, he was greeting the second conductor in an embarrassed manner that was immaterial, as that individual was wholly occupied with the woman and baby, whom he regarded with a peculiar expression. He was, of course, Charlie's old friend, Jack Boyd.

Charlie surrendered. He agreed to swear to anything if Boyd would not make his plurality of wives a convention issue.

Boyd, himself, was in high spirits, having a rôle more to his liking. By a tacit understanding, neither he nor Clifford mentioned their former acquaintance. He expressed his regrets for having caused Miss Holland trouble; he did not know she had cashed a draft. "She is the cleverest girl I ever ran across," he declared to the bunch of land captains who had collected to hear the fun. "First she was Mrs. McCarty; then, when I addressed her at the hotel under the impression she was — out for a good time — you know, she claimed to be Miss Holland; and when she had almost convinced me of this, she turned around and satisfied me all over again that she was Mrs. McCarty. I would credit that girl with being the Queen of Sheba."

"What business have you addressing my wife, if she is out for 'a good time'?" demanded McCarty; and Boyd subsided under the laughter at his expense.

"It was the fear of causing Mr. McCarty trouble," explained Clifford, "that induced Miss Holland to assume his name a second time. And, moreover, she stoutly maintained it, after she found the house full of railroad people, in the face of serious consequences to herself. It was at her request that I came to see Mr. McCarty before taking any other steps in her behalf." Clifford had been betrayed into warm enthusiasm.

"You seem to take a great interest in the young lady, a relative, I presume?" suggested Ross; and the young man, taken unawares, colored and could find no suitable answer. They all laughed, and all agreed to stand by McCarty and see him through. And the band played "El Capitan."

Clifford returned to Jacksonville on Boyd's train, and together they presented overwhelming evidence in Miss Holland's favor, and her case was dismissed.

The elder Hollands reached Jacksonville the following day, the yellow fever proving to have been merely typhoid malaria. They expressed themselves duly grateful for Mr. Clifford's kindness after "Pauline's fooling escapade," and all went to St. Augustine together.

Mr. Holland took such a fancy to "Dick," as he called Richard, that he urged him not to abandon him to the exclusive society of the ladies, but to postpone his trip down the river. That Dick was persuaded aroused no suspicions in his breast. Was he not one of "the boys"? If Mrs. Holland had any misgivings as to the sufficiency of her lord's charms, she kept her own counsel.

One night, several weeks after our party had located in the oldest city in the Union, — and the youngest, — Dick and Pauline sat upon the sea-wall. A gentle surf splashed at their feet and broke along the wall like distant thunder. A breeze, salt-laden, was as balmy as summer, and a full golden orb turned a pathway of waves into shimmering silver. Distinct and impressive rose the gray, gloomy form of old Spanish Fort Marion, for whose impenetrable walls of amalgamated shell countless millions of coquinos had lived and died. The moonlight could be felt and was intoxicating. They sat bewitched and inspired.

"Do you know," she broke the spell at last, "I have a queer guilty feeling whenever I sign my name, after the notoriety it obtained in Jacksonville."

"Like it?" he insinuated.

"Like it? Notoriety?" Her tone expressed disgust and her eyes flashed the scorn merited, but she lowered them quickly upon meeting the look in his, and attempted to rise hastily. "You are on my frock, Mr. Clifford."

Dick apologized, but failed to release her. And then, as she could not dodge the issue, he proceeded to point out how easily he could fix the matter of which she complained. There was still one name she had not tried, he reminded her, and he eloquently urged its speedy adoption.

With the splendor of the moon, stars, and sea, and all the glory of a tropical night, lending magic to a pair of fine eyes, we believe he finally convinced her of the expediency of this move.

The Mansion of Forgetfulness.*

BY DON MARK LEMON.

OUR months after the salt waves had laid at his feet the cold form of his Love, came the news that Herbert Munson was the possessor of a startling secret. He had, it was stated, discovered a Purple Ray that would wither and destroy certain human cells of memory without injury or danger to neighboring cells. This rumor was followed by the still more amazing report that Munson had erected the Mansion of Forgetfulness, to which all who would free their minds of a hopeless passion might repair, and in one brief hour, forget.

And, sure enough, here they came—those who loved not wisely but too well, those who loved deeply but hopelessly, and those who loved the Dead and could endure their grief no longer—and the Purple Ray “plucked from the memory its rooted sorrow” and they went forth from the Mansion of Forgetfulness unscarred and fancy-free.

Yet he who showed others how to forget would not himself forget. It was agony to know that she was dead, and he would never see her face again, yet he shrank from forgetfulness as the soul shrinks from oblivion. Try as he would, he could not drag himself from the haunted halls of memory, though he remembered that the world without was wonderfully fair, and other women, perhaps as lovely as she, were waiting there to love and be loved. No! Let others forget, he would not! Not that he lived in hope, for had he not kissed the salt foam from her dead face? But that memory was all that remained of a Love who was no more.

He watched them come and go—watched the many, ah, too many, pilgrims arrive with sorrowful, love-haunted faces, but depart with unconcerned, care-free looks, and at times he feared that his philanthropy was a sacrilege. There seemed something unholy in this sudden transmutation of grief into gladness—this swift thrusting aside of the tragic presence of sorrow—yet they had chosen of their own free will to forget a hopeless passion, and they could now return whence they came and love again, more wisely if less deeply.

* Copyright, 1907, by The Shortstory Publishing Company. Copyright secured in Great Britain. All rights reserved.

Some came, thinking to blot out other memories than that of a hopeless love—memories of sin and crime—but the Purple Ray would not be thwarted to such base purposes, and they left, abashed and disappointed.

It was in winter, when the snow was changed to crystal as it fell upon the walls and cornices of the beautiful marble edifice, or piled itself in drifts of sifted diamonds against the stained glass windows, when a lady came alone across the vales and entered the broad gateway of the Mansion of Forgetfulness.

Something in her manner—perhaps her agitated hesitation at the portals—moved the master to accost her.

"Kind friend," he said, "were it not better to remember what you now seek to forget?" As he spoke he drew closer about his face the cowl he wore to conceal his identity from the merely curious.

A sigh was the only immediate answer, as the pilgrim leaned wearily against a marble pillar. Then came the low spoken words:

"Perhaps I may only half forget. I would remember, yet not remember so acutely."

"No, you will wholly forget. The Purple Ray is oblivion itself."

"Ah, well, better I kill these painful memories than break my heart!"

"Then, if it must be so, enter and forget."

"Show me the way and let me go quickly," was the plea of the veiled lady. "I have come far, and the worst is only a few steps farther on."

"Come, then!" and the master led the way to the room of the Purple Ray.

An hour passed, when the door was opened and the veiled visitor came forth and descended the broad stairway. She moved quickly and lightly, and at the foot of the stairs she laughed musically as she again met the master.

"Have you forgotten?" he asked.

"Forgotten! I know that I have forgotten something, else why am I here, yet I do not know what I have forgotten."

"So they all say!"

A flush of rosy light shone from a slender window overhead, haloing the pilgrim like a saint.

"How beautiful everything is!" she exclaimed. "Why do I wear this veil? I will no longer!"

So saying, she loosened it, disclosing a face young and exquisitely fair. The man shrank back as if pierced by a bolt.

"My God, it is her spirit!" he gasped.

"No, no!" protested the visitor. "I am not a spirit, and I fear I am too, too human."

"You are Morella!" whispered the man, staring before him like one peering through intense darkness.

"I am. Who are you that you ask?"

"Morella! I thought you dead! I kissed you for dead and then the waves swept me away and I saw you no more."

"Some fishermen once found me on a sandy beach, where they said I had fainted. Who are you?"

The man drew back his cowl. "Look!" There was no light of recognition in the other's eyes. "My God! the Ray has blotted out all memory!"

"Pray tell me what you mean, and let me go," came the passionless words.

A groan was the only reply, and the man hid his face in his hands.

"You seem to know what I have forgotten. Has it aught to do with you?"

"O Morella, it were better that I thought you dead than to know that you have forgotten! Do you not recall our betrothal? See, you have the ring upon your hand! Does it not awaken one recollection of other days?"

The girl gazed blankly at the ring on her hand, and shook her head.

"Has the Ray blotted out every fair memory! Have you returned to life only to forget! Try to think, dearest: Do you not remember that day in Naples when we pledged eternal love for one another?"

"I remember no betrothal." A deep look of pity came into the speaker's eyes when she saw the pain her words had caused. "If remembrance is so sad, why do you not also forget?"

"My love!" he groaned, "you are making the world darker to me than to dying eyes! You ask me to forget! You!"

"You forget that I have forgotten."

The man groaned in utter anguish.

As she turned to go he stayed her by a gentle touch. "Wait here while I, too, go and kill that memory!"

He dragged himself up the broad stairway, looking back once when he had reached the landing, then turned and staggered towards the room of the Purple Ray.

The Last 50 cents in the World

A lady in the enthusiasm of regained health and old-time joy, writes :

"If I had only 50 cents left in the world, I'll tell you how I would invest it: Postum, 25 cents; Grape-Nuts, 15 cents; cream, 10 cents, and I'd live like a queen while it lasted.

"Postum has done more for me in building up my health and strengthening my nerves than all the medicines I've taken in the 45 years of my life.

"I suffered about 20 years of that time with nervous sick-headache often spending 3 days of each week in bed. If I went out one day, I'd likely spend the next in bed—so nervous, life was not altogether happy as one can imagine.

"Seven years ago I left off coffee and commenced drinking Postum Food Coffee. My strength quickly returned and nervousness and headaches became a thing of the past.

"If people tell me they don't like Postum, I nearly always find they have not boiled it long enough, for it is surely the ideal drink when made right, and is full of wholesome goodness."

"There's a Reason" for

POSTUM

Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., U. S. A.

Read This Letter

From The President Of A
Widely Known Mfg. Concern

J. Edmund Thompson, Esq.
Worcester, Mass.

Dear Sir:-

My experience with your Physiological Method of Exercise, covering many months, justifies me in saying that it is the best that has ever come under my observation.

It gives the business man and others who lead an ordinary life just what they require to insure a healthy condition of the body.

It is so common-sense in its application and so fascinating in its practice, that I have no hesitation in commending it to one and all.

Sincerely,

You have my permission to publish
J. E. Read.

J. E. Read.

I Have Something To Say To Every Business & Professional Man In This Country

I Can Make You a BETTER MAN - Physically. No doubt you believe yourself a well man now. No doubt you think that the fatigue which follows a hard day's work is natural; that the indigestion, constipation and headaches which you and most other business men suffer from are inevitable; that the nervousness and occasional insomnia is something to be expected; that there is no relief from the added flesh that comes with advancing years.

BUT YOU'RE WRONG! Every one of these things is unnatural and unnecessary. I have proved this to hundreds of men by teaching them how to improve their physical condition to such a degree that the hardest day's work brings no fatigue, indigestion, constipation, and headaches are alike unknown, sleep comes as regularly as the night, and excess flesh gives place to healthy tissue. Any one of these men will gladly confirm my statements, and the letter I reproduce above is but one of many that I have on file.

My Physiological Method of Exercise is absolutely unique — as different from ordinary exercise or "physical culture" as light is different from darkness. My mail instruction is entirely individual. I study each case, outline each course, and dictate every letter personally. Give me ten minutes a day and I will give you health that will make work a pleasure and add years to your life. I will do all I promise or refund every cent of my fee.

Write me something of your present condition and I will send you without charge a letter telling exactly what I can do for you. I will also send you my booklet, "HOW TO KEEP A GOOD GRIP ON YOUR HEALTH," which tells all about my method. You incur no obligation, and I promise you immunity from annoying solicitation.

J. EDMUND THOMPSON, 307 Main St., Worcester, Mass.

ADMINISTRATION AND INSTRUCTION
BUILDINGS.
OCCUPIED ENTIRELY BY THE I. O. S.

The Business of THIS Place is to Raise Salaries

That sounds queer, doesn't it? And yet there is such a place in reality — The International Correspondence Schools, of Scranton, Pa., an institution the entire business of which is to raise not merely salaries — but your salary.

To achieve that purpose the I. O. S. has a working capital of many millions of dollars, owns and occupies three large buildings, covering seven acres of floor space, and employs 2700 trained people, all of whom have one object in view — to make it easy for you and all poorly-paid men to earn more. Truly then — the business of this place is to raise salaries.

Every month an average of 300 I. O. S. students voluntarily report increased salaries.

In 1906, 3376 students so reported. These students live in every section. Right in their own homes, at their present work, the I. O. S. goes to them, trains them to advance in their chosen line, or to profitably change to a more congenial occupation.

The same opportunity now knocks at your door. What are you going to do with it? Are you going to lock the door in its face and lag along at the same old wages, or are you going to open the door and give the I. O. S. a chance to show you? Perhaps you don't see how, but the I. O. S. does. That is its business — to raise your salary.

Here is all you have to do. From this list select the position you prefer and notify the I. O. S. by postal or letter. It costs you nothing but the stamp to learn how the I. O. S. can raise your salary.

For a Good Salary

Here is a list of good positions. Select the one you prefer, write a postal to The International Correspondence Schools, Box 834, Scranton, Pa., and ask how you can qualify to fill it at a good salary.

Be sure to mention the position you prefer.

Bookkeeper	Telephone Engineer
Stenographer	Elec. Lighting Supt.
Advertisement Writer	Mechan. Engineer
Show Card Writer	Surveyor
Window Trimmer	Stationary Engineer
Commercial Law	Civil Engineer
Illustrator	Building Contractor
Civil Service	Architect'l Draftsman
Chemist	Architect
Textile Mill Supt.	Structural Engineer
Electrician	Bridge Engineer
Elec. Engineer	Mining Engineer
	Mechanical Draftsman

Five Beautiful Rose Plants Free

Will bloom this season
Guaranteed One Year Old — Well Rooted —
Not Clippings

In order to introduce

The Home Magazine

into 100,000 additional homes we will send these Five Choice Rose Plants absolutely free.

The subscription price of
THE HOME MAGAZINE
is one dollar a year—but extraordinary value may be offered with new subscriptions, as new subscribers invariably become old ones.

The Home Magazine

is an illustrated monthly for every home-lover.
No other publication is like it. A helpful companion for every member of the household, its note is one of inspiration and good cheer.

Splendid stories, beautiful illustrations and important feature articles characterize every issue. Men and women of authority and experience are in charge of the many departments.

The Roses Sent Will Be These Splendid Varieties:

Crimson Rambler. Greatest of all Ramblers.

Bridesmaid. Deep Pink. Bud of exquisite shape and contour.

The Bride. Pure ivory white Tea Rose.

Star of Lyon. Magnificent golden yellow.

Helen Gould. Red.

Desk 10

The Bobbs-Merrill Company
Indianapolis
Indiana

Send Fifty Cents for six months' subscription to THE HOME MAGAZINE for yourself or a friend, and the Rose Plants will be sent you prepaid without any charge whatever. If you are not delighted with the roses and the magazine we will refund your money without a question.

REVERSIBLE Linene Collars and Cuffs

Have You Worn Them ?

Not "celluloid"—not "paper collars"—but made of fine cloth, exactly resemble fashionable linen goods. Price at stores, 25 cents for box of ten. (2½ cents each.)

No Washing or Ironing

When soiled discard. By mail 10 collars or 5 pairs, cuffs for 30 cents. Sample collar or pair cuffs for 6 cents in U. S. stamps. Give size and style.

REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. O, Boston, Mass.

STRAIGHT LEGS

Positively trim, stylish, straight-line effect with our Pneumatic Forms. Sent on Approval. Unseen, unfelt, inexpensive, durable. "A marvelous invention." Also, without charge, exercises to give shape, force, action to the legs. Book, proofs and chart sent free under plain letter seal.

THE ALISON CO.,
Dept. 39 Buffalo, N. Y.

AGENTS $108.50 per month selling these wonderful scissors. Y. C. Gibson, Columbus, O., sold 25 pairs in 3 hours, made $15. You can do it; we show how. FREE OUTFIT. Thomas Co. Bk. 1st, Dayton, O.

CHEW... Beeman's THE ORIGINAL Pepsin Gum

Cures indigestion and Sea-sickness.

All Others are Imitations.

Pabst Extract The Best Tonic

For the Overworked

Work and worry of a business, life, the cares of house and the strain of society, tend to lessen the vitality of men and women, often bringing about a state of collapse. You are not sick, but nature has been overtaxed; your sleep does not refresh, your energy is lacking and you have lost your grip on the good things in life. These are the warnings—the system must be strengthened. At this critical time, the remedy is

Pabst Extract The Best Tonic

Being an extract of rich barley malt and choicest hops, it not only furnishes nourishment in predigested form, but acts as a tonic, giving you a desire for food, and furnishing your system the power to draw quicker, better and greater energy from what you eat. The gentle, soothing effect of the hops restores your nerves to their normal state, causing peaceful and refreshing sleep, strengthening the brain and giving new life to the tired muscles.

Pabst Extract The Best Tonic

Will strengthen the weak and overworked. Will produce sleep. Will build up and feed the nerves. Will conquer dyspepsia. Will help recovery from sickness. Will assist nursing mothers.

25c at all Druggists
Insist Upon the Original

Guaranteed under the National Pure Food Law.
U. S. Serial No. 1921

Booklet and Picture entitled "Baby's First Adventure," sent free on request.

Pabst Extract Dept. 37
Milwaukee, Wis.

PETER'S

"High as the Alps in quality"

*THE ORIGINAL
MILK*

CHOCOLATE ALONE
AT THE TOP!

High above all other eating chocolates stands

"GALA PETER"

Pure, wholesome, and "irresistibly
delicious."

"You never grow tired of PETER'S."

LAMONT, CORLISS & CO.
Sole Importers, New York

LOFTIS SYSTEM

Diamonds on Credit

YOU CAN EASILY OWN A DIAMOND OR WATCH, or present one as a gift to some loved one. Whenever you select from our beautiful catalog, we send on approval. Pay one-fifth on delivery, balance in 5 equal monthly payments. Your credit is good. As a pure investment nothing is safer than a Diamond. LOFTIS THE OLD RELIABLE ORIGINAL DIAMOND 10% annual increase in value. Written guarantee of quality and value. Catalogs free. Write for it today. Do it now.

LOFTIS & CO. Dept. D-52, 99 to 101 State St., Chicago, Ill.

CLASS PINS AND BADGES

For Society or Lodge — College or School

Made to order in any style or material. Read our money saving offer. Either of the two styles here illustrated, engraved in one or two colors and showing any letters or numerals, but not more than shown in illustration.

Silver Pins, $1.00 down. Sample, 10c. Sterling Silver, $2.50 down. Sample, 25c. FREE our new and handsomely illustrated catalog—shows new styles in gold and silver. Satisfaction guaranteed. Celluloid Buttons and Ribbon Badges at right prices. Special designs and estimates free. BASTIAN REOS. CO., 31 F South Ave., Rochester, N. Y.

TWO FOR 10c.

16-inch Tinted Centerpieces. We want you to see our new 1907 catalog of Art Embroidery Goods. As a special introduction offer we will send it to you with two of these 16-inch tinted centerpieces, Holly, Cherry, Wild Rose, Violet, Strawberry or Conventional Design, for only 10c. Send today. CORONA MFG. CO., Dept. 143 291-J Congress St., Boston, Mass.

VENTRILOQUISM

Learned by any Man or Boy at home. Small cost. Send to-day 2-cent stamp for particulars and proof. O. A. SMITH, Room 203, 3040 Knoxville Ave., PEORIA, ILL.

PLAYS FOR Amateurs

The largest stock in the U.S. Our Free Catalogue includes Plays, Recitations, Dialogues, Hand-Books, etc. THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY 910 Arch Street, Philadelphia

Magic Tricks

8 good tricks, complete apparatus, full directions, 16c. Illustrated catalog of all kinds of

Magical Apparatus Free

BAILEY & TRIFF CO.,

Box 412 . . . Cambridgeport, Mass.

Astrology

Prof. John Dix

Fellow of the Society of Science, Letters and Arts of London, England.

A Trial Reading will be furnished without charge to any responsible person who will enclose stamp for reply and give Birth date.

PROF. JOHN DIX, Dept. 37, Box 2316, Boston, Mass.

TEDDY BEAR PINS

Roosevelt's famous Teddy Bears reproduced in heavily Gold-washed Pins. Send for one to-day! Stickpins, 25c; Shirt-waist pins, 25c; Hatpins, 50c. W. B. Gilbert, Broad Exchange Bldg., New York

A Happy Marriage

Depends largely on a knowledge of the whole truth about self and sex and their relation to life and health. This knowledge does not come intelligently of itself, nor correctly from ordinary everyday sources.

Sexology

(Illustrated)

by William H. Walling, A. M., M. D.

Imparts in a clear, wholesome way, in one volume:

- Knowledge a Young Man Should Have.
- Knowledge a Young Husband Should Have.
- Knowledge a Father Should Have.
- Knowledge a Father Should Impart to His Son.
- Medical Knowledge a Husband Should Have.
- Knowledge a Young Woman Should Have.
- Knowledge a Young Wife Should Have.
- Knowledge a Mother Should Have.
- Knowledge a Mother Should Impart to Her Daughter.
- Medical Knowledge a Wife Should Have.

Rich Cloth Binding, Full Gold Stamp, Illustrated, $3.00. Write for "Other People's Opinions" and Table of Contents. Puritan Pub. Co., Dept. 133, Phila., Pa.

50 BULBS 25 Cents.

Will grow in the house or out of doors.

- Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocus, Fuchsias, Oxalis, Jonquils, Delphiniums, Dewey Lily, Tuberoses, Gladioli, Chinese Lily, Begonia, Gloxinia, Lilies of the Valley—all postpaid, 25c. in stamps or coin.

As a premium with these Bulbs we will send FREE a giant collection of flower seeds—over 20 varieties. NATIONAL NURSERY, Dept. 15 Boston, Mass.

Grow Mushrooms

For Big and Quick Profits

Small Capital to Start A Safe Business

I am the largest grower in America. Ten years' experience enables me to give practical instruction in the business worth many dollars to you. No matter what your occupation is or where you are located, here is an opportunity to acquire a thorough knowledge of this paying business.

Send for Free Book giving particulars and information, how to start, cost, etc. Address

JACKSON MUSHROOM FARM Dept. 121 3243 N. Western Ave., Chicago, Illinois

The Minstrel
Size, 8 x 10 1/2 inches

A Chance

is here offered to secure something that will cause you to be Boys and Girls again—all of you who used to love

To Spend an Evening

with the merry, good old-fashioned Minstrels of days gone by. The jolly Senegambian Serenader whose picture you see here drives dull care away. He is a messenger of mirth and merriment—a Banisher of the Blues. It is a truth older than the hills that "a black cat brings luck." This particular Black Cat is a veritable Mascot. He is on the best possible terms with the whole world and particularly

With the Man in the Moon

His picture on the walls of your Den or Library, Summer Camp or Winter Home, means Good Luck. Your chance—your only chance—to secure this picture is explained on the following page. If you could read some of the enthusiastic letters of people who have availed themselves of this chance, you would feel like telegraphing your order. THIS IS YOUR LAST CHANCE.

Cherry Blossom
Size, 8 x 10½ inches

This Jolly Pair

Here are two of the 150 Clever Pictures designed by the artist of The Black Cat, and which until June first may be secured under the following Half Price combination offer.

There are 324 sets left. When these are gone we cannot furnish a set at any price, as this is the last edition.

For Your Own

or your friend's Winter Den or Summer Camp, Cozy Corner, Library, Club Room or Nursery, these attractive creations are "very much all right." They are on paper 8 x 10½ inches, suitable for framing and make ideal Card Party Prizes. The collection also includes The Minstrel, The Football Hero, The Drummer, The Black Butterfly, The Kindergarten, etc., and many Decorative Tail Pieces and Initials. The price is one dollar a set, but for 60 days more they will be furnished with a year's subscription to The Black Cat, at exactly half price, that is, a full year's subscription to The Black Cat and a complete set of the pictures, both postpaid, for 75 cents, instead of $1.50.

The Shortstory Publishing Company
Boston, Mass.

Troubadour
Size, 8 x 10½ inches

Cook's Malto-Rice

A Pure, Ready-to-eat Rice, Malted

RICE contains more nutriment and supplies more energy to the human body than anything that grows out of the ground, and is the easiest food to digest.

MALT as a marvelously beneficial stimulant and tonic, man had known for centuries, but only yesterday did he learn to combine it to the greatest advantage with his food.

COOK'S MALTO-RICE IS A PERFECT BLENDING OF MALT AND RICE.

Thoroughly cooked, ready to serve from package to dish.

EVERY PACKAGE OF MALTO-RICE IS STERILIZED.

It's pure, free from "lumps," germs, and will keep.

Ask your grocer to-day for a package of

COOK'S MALTO-RICE

15 Cents

12 Art Panels 50¢

Superb Reproductions of Famous Paintings—Studies of the Human Form Divine
Size 7 x 10

These pictures are real gems—the most exquisite portrayals of "Woman Beautiful" ever shown in one collection. We send a full set of 12 complete, prepaid, together with 10 miniature illustrations of other beautiful art pictures for only 50¢ cash, money order or U.S. stamps. Or two sets (different) for $1.00. Send at once. Money back if not satisfied.

GORDON ART CO.

1209 Foster Ave., Dept. B-20, Chicago

Free

Order at once and we will include with each set an extra picture, absolutely free and complimentary.

"Fay Ideal" Stockings

For Men, Women, Boys and Girls
Buttons at waist. No supporters to buy. Perfect for comfort, economy and health. Feel fine. Stay up. Best yarns. Best dyes. Summer and winter weights. Fully guaranteed. TRY THEM. Buy at your dealer, or give his name and we will send on receipt of price. Write for free circular.

THE FAY STOCKING CO., 69E, St. Elyria, Ohio.

50 KINDS FLOWER SEEDS FOR 10¢

And Collection Flowering BULBS FREE

FREE SEEDS

Aster, Balsam, Fanny, Sweet Pea, Pink, Cosmos, Verbena, Nasturtium, Cypress Vine, Heliotrope, Mignonette, and 39 other kinds.

DIRECTIONS:—Write name and address plainly, enclose 10¢ coin or stamps, for postage, etc., and you will receive at once 50 varieties best flower seeds and a collection of Flowering Bulbs FREE. Sent postpaid. STATE SUBSIDIARY, Dept. 15, Boston, Mass.

LADY SEWERS

wanted to make up shirts at home; $10 per 100; can make 2 an hour; work sent prepaid to reliable women. Send reply envelope for information to UNIVERSAL CO., DEPT. 100, PHILA., PA.

GEISHA DIAMONDS

The Latest Scientific Discovery
Bright, sparkling, beautiful. For brilliancy they equal the genuine, standing all test and puzzle experts. One twentieth the expense. Sent free with privilege of examination. For particulars, prices, etc., address

THE E. GREGG MFG. & IMPRT. CO.
Dept. P, 301 E. Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

HERE is a picture of our great Edison outfit No. 5. THE Edison outfit of which we are especially proud.

Thomas A. Edison

$10 Buys a GENUINE EDISON

$10 for a genuine Edison Phonograph, a phonograph equipped with the model C reproducer, the identical reproducer used on Mr. Edison's highest priced machine, $10.00 for a new style improved 1907 model Edison phonograph that plays all the finest Edison gold moulded records—the identical gold moulded records (at $4.50 per dozen) that are now used on the highest priced Edison machines.

Mr. Edison Says:

"I want to see a phonograph in every American home." Thomas A. Edison.

ALL the NEW STYLE Improved 1907 model Edison phonographs—at one-fourth the price of inferior imitations! And if you prefer we sell outfits on easiest monthly payments at the rock-bottom prices—prices that may surprise you—without even interest $2.00 a Month on monthly payments $2.00 a Month and upward for genuine Edison phonograph outfits, including one dozen Edison gold moulded records.

Moreover we ship to responsible people anywhere in the United States on FREE TRIAL.

Free trial means free trial—no deposit, no money down, no C. O. D. shipment, outfit returnable at our expense. Convince yourself of the superiority of the wonderful offer now made on Mr. Edison's own original invention—the genuine Edison, the new style 1907 model Edison phonograph, equipped with Mr. Edison's own latest improvement. Convince yourself by this free trial offer. All reliable people should write at once for the Edison catalogue (sent free, prepaid).

WRITE for the Edison catalogues. Don't miss this offer. Write Today.

F. E. HANSON, Edison Phonograph Distributors
149-150 Michigan Ave., Suite 1394 Chicago

Print Your Own Cards

Circulars, books, newspaper, Press, $5. Large size, $8. Money saving maker. All easy, printed rules. Write factory for catalog, presses, type, paper, cards. The Press Co., Meriden, Conn.

IT PAYS BIG To amuse the Public With

Motion Pictures

NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY as our instruction Book and "Business Guide" tells all. We furnish Complete Outfit with Big Advertising Posters, etc. Humorous dramas brimful of fun, travel, history, religion, temperance work and songs illustrated. One man can do it. Astonishing Opportunity in any locality for a man with a little money to show in churches, school houses, lodge halls, theatres, etc. Big profits each entertainment. Others do it, why not you? It's easy; write to us and we'll tell you how. Catalogue free.

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO., 454 Chemical Bank Bldg., CHICAGO.

CHICAGO TO NEW YORK IN 10 HOURS

THE CHICAGO-NEW YORK ELECTRIC AIR LINE RAILROAD will be the only direct line between America's largest cities. It will be 161 miles shorter than the shortest now in operation, and its trains will make the trip in 10 hours.

It is in actual process of construction. Early in September the first shovel of earth was turned, and on February 2d of this year the first spike was driven. Last summer the announcement of the enterprise was first made to the public and no project of recent years has aroused such widespread interest as has attended the first operations. When the plan was revealed the railroad world was agog. The idea seemed audacious—not because it was impossible—but because of its significance. It was startling because a thing of such necessity had not already been done. It thrilled when the boundless possibilities of the plan unfolded themselves as the mind dwelt upon the idea.

The commercial interests of America's largest cities demand something different, and the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line R. R. will meet that demand.

The conditions which exist to-day are appalling—the railroad facilities of the country, particularly those between Chicago and the Atlantic seaboard, are terribly inadequate. Because of congestion, shipments invariably suffer delay, and our commercial activities which are dependent upon transportation facilities can see no progress until relief is found.

The condition is a serious one, and is known to officials and traffic managers; but the people at large, who are indirectly affected, have no idea of how the demands upon the railroads have exceeded the limit of their abilities. President James J. Hill, of the Great Northern, says: "The Railroads are Simply Swamped." In a recent letter he stated: "The railroads everywhere are taxed beyond their power. The people of the United States, therefore, are face to face with the greatest business problem that has ever threatened the nation."

The organizers of the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line seem to have the most rational solution of the problem yet advanced. It is being applied where it will be of the greatest good to the commercial interests of the nation. Their plan of financing the enterprise is to have the people build and

A TRAIN-LOAD OF STEEL RAILS FOR THE AIR LINE
ARRIVING AT LAPORTE, INDIANA

Every day people are becoming more and more impressed with the fact that there is urgent need of a direct railroad which will adequately serve the business interests of America's greatest centres—New York and Chicago. There are 4,000,000 people in one city—2,000,000 in the other—still more millions in their tributaries, and these cities are adding hundreds of thousands to their populations each year, and yet there is no direct railroad between them.

The only lines in operation take long winding courses for the purpose of getting traffic from other cities. In fact, when they were planned the city of Chicago was hardly worthy of consideration so far as railroad traffic was concerned. And at that time 30 miles an hour was considered high speed. The shortest existing line between New York and Chicago goes 161 miles out of a direct course, the next shortest 230 miles.

operate a railroad.

THE NEW PLAN

There is no preferred stock—there are no mortgage bonds, and all of the shares will be in the hands of the people. It is simply a great partnership—the organizers and the largest investors will profit according to their holdings, the same as the laboring man who owns a single share.

There is no bonded debt. As money is received from the sale of stock it is put into construction work, and to-day the thousands of ties and the thousands of tons of steel rails which are either laid or scattered along the line ready to be put in place are owned free and clear. And this will apply as well to the large amount of machinery and steel bridge work for which contracts have been awarded. For miles

Via N. Y. Central Lines, 980 Miles

Via Pennsylvania R. R., 911 Miles

Via Chicago-New York Electric Air Line R. R. — 750 Miles

ties and rails are already laid, and as soon as the weather permits the work will be pushed with greater expedition. The line of the road in Indiana, which is now the centre of operations, will present scenes of tremendous activity during the coming open season. Thousands of additional men will be added to the present forces, the company's orders being to engage men for the work as fast as they can be secured.

COUNTRY WELCOMES IT

The interests of the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line Railroad are the interests of the communities through which it passes, and it has therefore met with hearty support instead of opposition. The same force which has surmounted all obstacles so far will also overcome any other difficulty that may present itself.

Organized capital wields a tremendous power today, but it is dwarfed to insignificance by the mightiest of all earthly powers—the power of the people. This is a people's enterprise—the railroad is being built by and for them, and with the people behind the project no force on earth can stop it.

The new electric road is sure to have an enormous patronage. As soon as it is in successful operation it will be the logical route for the United States mails, for despatch is of first consideration with the government. It will command all of the passenger traffic it can possibly carry because of its advantages of speed, comfort, convenience and the saving of time and money. There seems little reason to doubt that the success of the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line is as certain as the permanency of the cities it will join.

There never has been a time since operations started that the shares in this great enterprise have not been worth par, but in order to stimulate public interest and thus facilitate the work of raising funds to push operations forward, the company adopted the method of offering certain allotments of stock at prices much below its actual value. The present allotment is being sold at $45 a share and it is being taken rapidly. The company is doing everything possible to make it easy for people in moderate circumstances to join in the enterprise for it is the desire of the organizers that the people and not the millionaires should build this road. Shares may be paid for—$4.50 down and $4.50 a month for nine months and no interest is charged on deferred payments. The first attached coupon may be used in purchasing stock and the second to secure further information.

THE HANCOCK COMPANY, General Sales Agent

CHICAGO-NEW YORK ELECTRIC AIR LINE R. R. STOCK

BOSTON
Old South Building

NEW YORK
Flatiron Building

CHICAGO
The Temple

PHILADELPHIA, 1018 Pennsylvania Building
BALTIMORE, 544 Equitable Building
CLEVELAND, 519 Garfield Building
BUFFALO, 606 White Building
CINCINNATI, Union Trust Co. Building

ST. LOUIS, Missouri Trust Building
MILWAUKEE, 1019 Pabst Building
MINNEAPOLIS, Railroad Building
ST. PAUL, 444 Endicott Building
DETROIT, 606 Moffat Building

THE HANCOCK CO., Fiscal Agent
1001 to 1010 Old South Building
Boston, Mass.

Please find enclosed $..... in (full or part) payment for..... shares of Chicago-New York Electric Air Line R. R. Stock.

Name

Address.....

B.C. Apr.

THE HANCOCK CO., Fiscal Agent
1001 to 1010 Old South Building
Boston, Mass.

I shall be interested to receive additional information regarding the Chicago-New York Electric Air Line R. R. Stock.

Name

Address.....

B.C. Apr.

$1000 NO LABOR NO SPECULATION

One good investment is worth a life-time of labor; $4 per month for 25 months invested NOW in Oregon timber will buy negotiable dividend stock secured by 100,000 feet of timber guaranteed by Bank and Trust Company. Will soon be worth $1000, besides paying 50 per cent dividends. Take a certainty by investing in Oregon's timber wealth. This is well worth your time to investigate. Full information on request. Write to-day.

NORTH COAST CO-OPERATIVE LUMBER CO.

Manufacturers and Exporters Suite 1-9 Realty Trust Bldg., Portland, Oregon

Six Months Free The Investment Herald

Leading mining, financial and investment magazine containing up-to-date information on mining, oil and other money making industries. It gives latest news from the great Nevada camps. It describes the principal companies and the best dividend paying stocks. It also describes a wonderfully successful system whereby heavy speculative profits may be quickly and easily made on absolutely safe investments. It will also procure for inquirers free, independent, unbiased, reliable reports on all companies. If you have made or contemplate making any investments of any kind, write for it at once without fail.

A. L. WISNER & CO., Publishers,
Dept. 10, 80 Wall Street, New York.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL

We ship on approval, without a cent deposit, freight prepaid. DON'T PAY A CENT if you are not satisfied after using the bicycle 10 days. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our latest art catalogs illustrating every kind of bicycle, and have learned our unheard of prices and marvellous new offers.

ONE CENT is all it will cost you to write a postal and everything will be sent you free postpaid by return mail. You will get much valuable information. Do not wait, write it now.

TIRES, Coaster-Brakes, Bulbs,

op-Wheels and all sundries at half-usual prices.

MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. F-111 CHICAGO

Take Your Pants Off

We will give you a new Pair worth $5 FREE Also a FANCY VEST and SUIT CASE with your First Order for one of our $10 SUITS.

We will make to your order from fashionable cloth cut and tailored in the latest style and finished equal to the BEST FOR ONLY

$10.00

If a suit made by us is not exactly as claimed or in any way different from our offer, you may keep the suit! Besides we will give you your money back.

We have customers in every state of the union now wearing our $10 Suits—why not you!

REMEMBER

an extra pair of fine worsted stylish $5.00 trousers, also a fancy-dress vest, and a patent suit case, all FREE with your First Suit. We dress you in style for every day and all occasions, all for only $10 and up. Write for free samples, fashion plate, measurement blanks and our Special Offer. Address

THE FIFTH AVENUE TAILORS

401 Keaser Bldg., 5th Ave. & Congress, Chicago
Reference: Royal Trust Bank. Capital and surplus $4,000,000

Be Your Own Boss!

MANY MAKE $2,000.00 A YEAR. You have the same chance. Start a Mail Order Business at home. We tell you how. Money coming in daily. Very good profits. Everything furnished. Write at once for our "Starter" and FREE particulars. B. C. KRUGER CO., 155 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

I Will Make You Prosperous

If you are honest and ambitious write me today. No matter where you live or what your occupation, I will teach you the Mail Order business by mail, appoint you Special Representative of my Company in your town, start you in a profitable business of your own, and help you make big money at once. Tons of opportunity for men without capital to become independent for life. Valuable book and full particulars free. Write today. Address nearest office.

NATIONAL CO-OPERATIVE REALTY COMPANY
1051 Athenaeum Building, CHICAGO
1051 Maryland Bldg., Washington, D.C.

Edw. E. Herder, Pres.

MAKE MONEY BY MAIL

Only spare time and little cash required to start. We teach you the mail order business by mail; thorough, practical instruction gleaned from experience of poor men who have become rich. If you are tired of being a drudging nobody, let us show you how to start and develop a big paying business of your own. Write now. MAIL ORDER SYSTEM, INC., 511 Phelps Bldg., SCRANTON, PA.

25CENTS will be paid for a complete copy of The Black Cat for July, 1900. Address, C. N. Thompson, Room 8, Fort Hill Building, Boston, Mass.

SURE CURE! Brooks' Appliance

New discovery. No chafing springs or pads. Automatic Air Cushion. Bands and draws the broken parts together as you would a broken fish. No salves. No lymphol. No ties. Durable, cheap. Pat. Sept. 10, '01.

SENT ON TRIAL CATALOGUE FREE
C. F. BROOKS, 4501 Brooks' Bldg., WASHINGTON, D.C.

Darken Your Gray Hair

DUBY'S HAIR COLORING HERBS restore gray, streaked or faded hair to its natural color, beauty and softness. Prevents the hair from falling out, promotes its growth, prevents dandruff, and gives the hair a soft, glossy and healthy appearance. IT WON'T STAIN THE SCALP. Is not sticky or dirty, contains no arsenic or lead, nitrate silver, copperas, or poisons of any kind, but is composed of roots, herbs, bark and flowers. PACKAGE MAKES ONE PINT. It will produce the most lustrant tresses from dry, coarse and wiry hair, and bring back the color irregularly washed before turned gray. Full size package sent by mail, postpaid, for 25 cents. OZARK HERB CO., Block 55, St. Louis, Mo.

DIAMONDS ON CHARGE ACCOUNT

WE WILL SELL YOU AT CASH PRICES.

Just drop us a postal stating size of stone and style of setting desired and we'll send you a beautiful, sparkling, pure white Diamond—a gem of the first water. No deposit required—we even pay the express. When the stone arrives, examine it carefully and compare it with other diamonds which COST MORE MONEY. If it isn't the finest, most brilliant diamond for the money you ever saw—send it back at our expense. If you like it pay part of price down and balance monthly ON YOUR OWN TERMS. A Don't hesitate—YOU can afford one of these Gems, no matter what your income.

for you PAY AS YOU PLEASE. Diamonds increase in value each year. They give an air of refinement and prosperity. As a present they are beyond compare. Why not bring to the eyes of your sweetheart, wife, daughter or mother an answering sparkle of delight with one of these exquisite gems set in ring, brooch or locket? Ask today for our FREE CATALOGUE OF DIAMONDS, WATCHES AND JEWELRY, and make your selection at once. Our liberal terms will surprise you.

THE WALKER-EDMUND CO.

Importers and Manufacturers 669 State St., Chicago.

MAGIC LANTERNS

Illustrated Catalogue, explaining how to make money on a small investment, SENT FREE.

STEREOPTICONS

that are easy to use and low in price. Moving Picture Films, Church and Mission work; brilliant effects, comic subjects. Lowest prices.

The Bright White Light, a portable, brilliant light, costs $c. an hour.

500 Lecture Sets with readings: 40,000 slides to rent.

WILLIAMS, BROWN & EARLE, 918 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Dept. 15.

Mullins Steel Boats

Motor Boats, Row Boats, Hunting and Fishing Boats.

built of steel with air chambers in each end like a life boat. They can't sink. Faster, more buoyant, practically indestructible, don't leak, dry out and are absolutely safe. No calking, no bailing, no trouble. Every boat is guaranteed. Highly endorsed by sportsmen. The ideal boat for pleasure, summer resorts, parks, etc.

THE W. H. MULLINS CO., 148 Franklin St., Salem, Ohio.

Write for Catalogue.

Rowboat #20⁰⁰

20 different Designs

Can ship immediately in any quantity. Need No Boat House. Never Leak, Rust, Check, Crack or Rot. Every boat has water tight compartment, so cannot sink. Write for FREE illustrated catalogue and special prices.

Michigan Steel Boat Co., 1205 Jefferson Av., Detroit, Mich.

TRICK VANISHING CARDS

BEST IN THE WORLD. 25 CARDS. IN A GLASS CASE. COVERS. IN THE CARDS WE HAVE SO MANY OF THEM. AFTER IT IS OFFERS IT GOES COMPLETELY OFF AND RETURNS AGAIN. YOU CAN TESTIFY YOUR FRIENDS FOR WEEKS COMPLETE. QUANTITY 25 CTS.

The M. Lewis Co., 400 Horton St., Philadelphia, Pa.

* BARODA DIAMONDS *

Set in Solid gold settings. You can own a diamond equal in brilliancy to any genuine stone at one-thirtieth the cost.

FLASH LIKE GENUINE

Send old test and expert examination. We guarantee them. See them first then pay. CATALOGUE FREE, patent Ring Measure included for 2 two cent stamps.

THE BARODA CO., Dept. 22, 220 North State St., Chicago, Ill.

$100,000 WORTH OF
REAL ESTATE EXPERIENCE
FOR $30
$5 STARTS
YOU

I teach "Modern Real Estate methods" by mail. It would cost all of $100,000 to duplicate my experience. For over ten years I have been identified in a responsible way with some of the largest real estate concerns in the United States: W. T. B. Roberts of Philadelphia, Realty Trust, Garden City Estates, and Wood, Harmon & Company of New York as Manager, Advertising Manager, General Sales Manager, and National Agency Director. These concerns have done an aggregate business exceeding $30,000,000. Any thinking person must appreciate the immense amount of knowledge and information I have acquired during my association all these years with many of the most successful real estate men in the country.

My course is founded entirely upon this experience and will prove of inestimable value to every real estate Broker, Agent or owner, or to those who desire learning the practical side of the most profitable and independent business in the world—no matter where they may be located.

Many men, who represented the above firms in all sections of the United States earned from $5,000 to $10,000 a year—so can you. My booklet, "Modern Real Estate Methods" can be had for a postal—it's free; write today.

Henry S. Meyers, 1826 Tribune Building, New York.

In all the light fashionable colors for Spring and Summer—Beautiful "Silver-silk." Send us only . . . $2.50 and we will send you, fully prepaid, a skirt made to your measure in any color.

This is an actual photograph of this splendid petticoat

The new French Fedora flare blouse of 15 inches, in three bias sections of fine plaiting, 1 1/2 inch gathered ruffles on every section. Very full body and sweep of 156 inches. You will be delighted with it

Guaranteed to wear one year without splitting

Examine this petticoat in your own home. If you are satisfied that it is the equal in beauty, fit, and style, and better in durability than any skirt you have ever owned, keep it. If you are not satisfied, send it back and your money will be refunded by return mail. We make this offer to advertise "Silver-silk," and send you a valuable, stylish tailored petticoat ready to put on and wear, so that you can fairly judge the merits of this new and wonderful fabric.

Cut out this coupon and mail to us with money-order for . . . $2.50

Thousands of America's finest-dressed women have taken advantage of this offer, and orders for duplicates in other colors are pouring in from them and from their friends who have seen the skirts.

Cut this out NOW
Order Coupon

Please send me a SILVER-SILK Petticoat.

Color _____ Front Length _____

Around Hips _____ Waist _____

Write name and address in margin,

J 2

SUFFOLK SILK CO.
Box 3233-J, BOSTON, MASS.

QUILTED MATTRESS PADS

MONEY spent wisely means comfort and pleasure to the spender. You go to bed to rest. Quilted Mattress Pads will make your bed comfortable as well as keep yours and baby's bed in a perfect sanitary condition.

The cost is small — and when washed they are as good as new.

Ask your Dry Goods
Dealer

Excelsior Quilting Co.
15 Light Street, New York, N. Y.

Hatch Chickens by Steam

with the
EXCELSIOR INCUBATOR OR WOODEN HEN

Send for free
Catalogue.

Economical and perfect hatching.
Absolutely reliable and self-regulating. Thousands in use to-day.
GEO. H. STAHL, Quincy, Ill.

ACoin Collection For $1.00

Specialty selected. Twenty plainly labelled coins of as many countries sent for $1.00. We buy and sell coins. List for sc. stamp. Established 34 yrs.
Alexander & Co., 214 C Washington St., Boston, Mass.

SOUVENIR POST CARDS

- Set Jamestown Exposition Cards, 10 cents.
- Set (10) Leading Stage Celebrities, 25 cents.
- Set (10) Exquisite Colored (rare) Foreign Cards, 25 cents.
- Set (25) Noted Places of America, 25 cents.
- Set (15) Humorous Cards, 15 cents.
- Set (6) Tinted Cards, 15 cents.
- Set (6) Birthday Cards, 15 cents.

Or entire collection of 78 costly and valuable cards for $1.00. Regular value from $5 to 15 cents each. Every purchaser of our cards is entitled to free membership in world's exchange club, so you can correspond and exchange cards with collectors in all parts of the world. (Membership now over 18,000.) Orders filled same day as received.

Address, WORLD POST CARD CO.,
16th and Euclid Avenue, Philadelphia, Penn.

MENNEN'S BORATED TALCUM TOILET POWDER

Unsettled Weather

of Spring months, with its raw chill winds, is especially hard on delicate complexions, unless protected and kept soft and clear by daily use of

MENNEN'S BORATED TALCUM POWDER

A delightful healing and soothing toilet necessity, containing none of the risky chemicals found in cheap toilet powders imitating Mennen's. Just get the habit of using Mennen's every day of the year, after shaving and after bathing.

Put up in non-refillable boxes for your protection. If Mennen's face is on the cover it's genuine and a guarantee of purity. Delightful after shaving. Sold everywhere, or by mail 25 cents. Sample Free. Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906. Serial No. 1463. Gerhard Mennen Co., Newark, N. J.

Try Mennen's
Violet (Borated) Talcum Powder.

Purity of Tone, Durability of Construction and Originality of Design have been the paramount features of

GABLER PIANOS

for more than half a century. They have made the Gabler preeminent among the pianos of the world for artistic quality — a favorite with the foremost musical artists.

You can own a Gabler Piano and pay for it easily by our special plan. Write us for full information and for catalogue.

ERNEST GABLER & BRO.

(Established 1854.)

459 Whitlock Ave., New York.

Plumbing & Heating Material

Sold to Consumers at Manufacturers Price

Clean—Sanitary—Odorless Newest Designs Best Appliances Finest Nickel Trimmings

We sell you these modern Bath Room Outfits direct—you need not pay exorbitant profits to your plumber.

Prices for Outfits as Shown:

No. 1. $37.50

No. 2. $44.00

No. 3. $55.00

No. 5. $110.00

Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Connections easily made. Any ordinary mechanic can install with the aid of our comprehensive working plans and instructions. Ask for Book—Modern Methods of Sanitary Plumbing—containing charts, drawings, and diagrams, showing how any ordinary mechanic can install plumbing fixtures without wiping joints. Also tells how to secure perfect sanitation. Price, 50c. We will send it free if you mention this Magazine.

Heating Plants for Buildings of Every Kind

We can save you from 30 to 50 per cent.

Send us sketch or diagram of your house for our estimate.

Steam and Hot Water plants of most modern construction.

We employ an efficient engineering department that will cheerfully furnish you ideas as to the correct method of heating your home or building. We guarantee satisfaction.

MODERN HEATING APPARATUS CAN BE EASILY INSTALLED IN ANY BUILDING—WE WILL MAKE YOU PLANS AND FURNISH FULL INSTRUCTIONS.

infusion. Anyone used to handling tools can install our heating plants either in a new or old building by following our complete yet simple instructions.

Write for our Book "Cold Weather Comfort." Useful information and heating guide. It tells you every phase of the heating question—also gives full and necessary information on the care of your plant. Mailed free to anyone mentioning this Magazine. Price to others, 25c. Ask also for our general 500-page Catalogue, No. A. S. 605, on merchandise, for the Home, the Field and the Workshop.

CHICAGO HOUSE WRECKING CO.

35TH AND IRON STREETS. CHICAGO.

LOWNEY'S

CHOCOLATE BON-BONS

*Pure
Delicious
Healthful*

The Most Perfect of Confections

REG'D U.S.
PAT OFF

*The Finest of Chocolate
Finest of Cane Sugar
Finest Nuts & Fruits and Finest Extracts of Fruits & Flowers
Nothing Else!*

*"Name
on Every Piece"*

WALTER M. LOWNEY CO.
CHOCOLATE AND CONFECTIONERS

Mental Fog

is a frequent result of "Starch-Indigestion."

A few days' change from white bread, cake, pastry, etc., to

Grape-Nuts

will bring relief and wisdom.

"There's a Reason"

Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.,
Battle Creek, Mich., U.S.A.

GENTLEMEN
WHO DRESS FOR STYLE
NEATNESS, AND COMFORT
WEAR THE IMPROVED

BOSTON GARTER

THE RECOGNIZED STANDARD
The Name is stamped on every loop—

The Velvet Grip
CUSHION BUTTON CLASP

LIES FLAT TO THE LEG—NEVER SLIPS, TEARS NOR UNFASTENS

Sample pair, 50¢. Cotton 35¢.
Mailed on receipt of price.

GEO. FROST CO., Makers
Boston, Mass., U.S.A.

ALWAYS EASY

For SPRAINS Use

POND'S EXTRACT

The Standard for 60 Years

Nothing else will so quickly relieve a sprain as POND'S EXTRACT. Bind the injured wrist, arm or ankle in a cotton bandage and keep the bandage constantly moist with POND'S EXTRACT.

POND'S EXTRACT is the greatest all-round household remedy ever produced and should be in every home ready for instant use.

Get the Genuine.
Sold only in original sealed bottles—Never in bulk.

Illustrated booklet, "First Aid to the Injured," sent free if you write

LAMONT, CORLISS & CO., Agents,
Dept. 20, 78 Hudson St., New York.

Purity of Tone,
Durability of Construction and Originality of Design

have been the paramount features of

GABLER PIANOS

for more than half a century They have made the Gabler preeminent among the pianos of the world for artistic quality—a favorite with the foremost musical artists.

You can own a Gabler Piano and pay for it easily by our special plan. Write for full information and for catalogue.

ERNEST GABLER & BRO.
(Established 1854.)

459 Whitlock Ave., New York